DYING ADRIFT.

Further Details of the Unhappy Voyage of the Brig Merryman.

Drifting Before the Wind in Charge of a Negro Cook—A Meeting in Mid-Ocean that Meant the Rescue of Two Crews—The Captain and Crew of the Don Juan Rescued and Brought into Port by the Bylgia—A Chapter of Accidents.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, October 8.—The remarkable voyage of Capt. Hoffschild and his crew of eleven men, leaving port in command of one vessel and arriving here in command of another, was the one topic of conversation among sailors yesterday. The Captain sailed from Stettin on July 11 with his crew on the barque Friederich Schalia, bound for Charleston, S. C., with a cargo of salt. All went well until September 12, when in latitude 20, longitude 56, a violent hurricane from the southeast set in, lasting several hours, during which the barque lost all her sails and spars and sprang aleak. The men set to work at the pumps and for nine days kept them going, succeeding in keeping the vessel comparatively free from water, although she was slowly but surely filling. On the afternoon of Sept. 21st the brig F. J. Merryman hove in sight, with signals of distress flying. When within hailing distance a tall negro appeared on the deck of the brig and shouted: "For God's sake send us some water and provisions, and a man who can navigate."

"Send us a boat," shouted back Capt. Hoffschild, and we'll all come aboard. Our small boats are gone and we're leaking."

"Can't do it," came the reply, "I've only two men on board."

This information startled the Captain, but he induced the negro to send the men to him and, in a short time, the entire crew were on board the brig. The Friederich Schalia was rapidly sinking. Then Capt. Hoffschild learned that Capt. Nickerson, his second mate and two men, of the Merryman, were dead, and that, for twelve days, the colored steward, with two men, had kept the vessel afloat. Neither the steward nor the men had any knowledge of navigation and had simply kept the brig before the wind with as little canvas on her as she could carry and still make progress. They had no knowledge of where they were sailing, and were kept in a CONSTANT STATE OF TERROR for fear of getting into some dangerous locality where they might be wrecked. They were also short of water and provisions, and had been living on barely enough to keep life in their bodies.

"The cause of all their trouble," said Capt. Hoffschild yesterday, "was African fever. This disease carried away their captain and other men on board. The brig was bound from Bathurst, on the west coast of Africa, for this port with a cargo of hides. While in port her first mate and one of her crew died of fever, and Capt. Nickerson, her commander, shipped a negro in the sailor's place, but being unable to get another first mate, sailed without one. Shortly after leaving port another of the crew died, followed, about a week later, by the captain himself, and, within another week, by the second mate and another of the crew. This left only the colored steward, one white sailor, and the negro who had been shipped at Bathurst. They were afraid to put much sail on the vessel for fear of being unable to get it furled in case of a storm, and so they simply sailed hither and thither, according to the wind. The cook, having no knowledge of navigation, had no object in view except to keep the brig afloat, and hope for some passing vessel to speak him. Of course his provisions ran short, as well as his water, and, when we spoke him, twelve days after his last man died, he and his two men were in a pitiful condition."

The abandoned bark Friederich Schalia was built in 1858, in Uckermunde, Germany, and was repaired in 1880. She registered 422 tons, and was owned in Stettin by Mr. O. Kisker and others. The F. J. Merryman was built in Bath, Me., and registers 345 tons. She is partly owned in this city. Captain Hoffschild intends to libel her.

The bark Bylgia, which arrived yesterday from Salena Cruz, South America, after a voyage of 141 days, brought Captain Thompson and the crew of five men of the schooner Don Juan. The Bylgia spoke the schooner on September 6, off the southern coast, with her main masts blown down, and the vessel drifting about at the mercy of the waves. The damage had been done three weeks before, in a hurricane which struck the Don Juan suddenly. Her captain and crew were in a healthy condition. The Don Juan was a new vessel, and was bringing coal to this port in ballast.

BURIED SKELETONS.

Shocking Crime, the Evidences of Which Were Found in a German Inn.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

MERIDEN, CONN., October 8.—A cable dispatch from Berlin sent a few days ago to the German newspapers announced the discovery of six human skeletons in the cellar of a tavern in a town named Turzig, near Rummelsberg, in Germany. One of the bodies was identified as that of B. Fuerstenberg, jr., a prominent merchant of that locality, who was never seen by his friends after he had entered that tavern. His identity was discovered by his clothing and valise. The authorities are looking for the former owner of the tavern, Carl Siefert. He has been found in this city and is recognized by several of the Germans here who came from Turzig as the keeper of the tavern in question. He displayed considerable money after he came here last April, and bought several building lots. The German Consul was notified of the whereabouts of Siefert, but he replied last night that he was not aware that Siefert was wanted in Germany, so he has not been arrested. Chief of Police Ford went to New York to-day to consult with the Consul. The theory is that these skeletons are bodies of travelers who were murdered and robbed. The cable message referred to, says: "Siefert the former owner of the tavern in Turzig, near, Rummelsburg, has emigrated to America. He was a tall, good looking man, with blonde beard, about 40 years old, and, by trade, a shoemaker. The present owner of the tavern found six human skeletons buried in the sand in his cellar. At the top lay the body of the merchant, missing since 1881. His name was B. Fuerstenberg, jr., from Zanow. His clothing and traveling bag led to his identification. The father of Fuerstenberg, at the time of his disappearance, offered a reward of 100 marks for information of his son or his goods. It was then suspected that he was murdered and robbed. Two persons, who were suspected, were searched for by the authorities and found by Constable Sebastian and arrested. They were Herman Schellake, from Stolp, 36 years of age, who was last seen with Fuerstenberg in the suburbs of Turzig, and Johan Donke, from Altwarchan, who was under arrest for eleven months, because it was suspected he sold the goods which Fuerstenberg carried. He said he bought them from an unknown woman. The remaining five skeletons were probably all merchants who were killed by Siefert, who robbed and then buried them. This horrible discovery was at once made known to the State authorities, and they have done all they can to capture the murderer who is now in America.

To-day Mrs. Siefert was seen while her husband was away. She explained that she and her husband had come to America because their son-in-law, Carl Schroeder, had sent for them. They had kept the tavern at Turzig for four years. She knew that a search had been made for the missing merchant, Fuerstenberg, but denied all knowledge of any dead bodies in the cellar. She and her husband had intended returning to Germany. They had purchased a lot here for $500 and sold it for $400, as they did not intend remaining here. They did not own the tavern at Turzig, but leased it. The first knowledge she had of any suspicion of the finding of the skeletons came through reading the German newspapers, and both she and her daughter and husband had since discussed the subject. The affair has created great excitement here among the Germans.

FOREWARNED.

The Republican Committee Makes a Denial of a Charge Not Yet Made.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, October 8.—The following statement was authorized to be made yesterday by the National Republican Executive Committee: "It has come to the knowledge of the National Republican Committee that the Democrats and Independents have prepared to spring on the country Tuesday next, through their newspaper channels, so as to affect the Ohio election on Tuesday, a charge of bribery against Mr. Blaine, with allegations of receipts, convincing proofs, etc. The committee have not yet been informed of what the charges are specially, but they understand they are on a level with the falsehoods that have been circulated about Mr. Blaine ever since the canvass opened."

TEN LIVES LOST

In the Gale Which Burst on Lake Michigan Last Night.

A Party of Men at Work on a Pier Near Chicago Literally Blown Into the Water—One Man Floated to Shore on a Piece of Timber—Others Saved by the Life-Saving Crew—The Rest Drowned Beyond the Reach of Help.

CHICAGO, October 8.—A storm on Lake Michigan last night blew away a small shanty in which the laborers employed in the inlet of the lake tunnel were lodged. It was set on piles in the lake, about a mile from the shore. There were sixteen men in all employed in the inlet, and by the carrying away of the shanty they were left clinging to the stringers of the beam in a most perilous position. One of the men came ashore on a plank near South Chicago, and it is feared that others have been drowned. The life-saving crew have gone to the rescue.

THE REMNANT SAVED.

The life-saving crew shortly before noon succeeded in throwing a line to the frail pier from which the shanty had been blown. The rescue of what remains of the party is now certain unless they should in the meantime be overcome by exhaustion and cold. Eight figares can be distinguished through a field glass, clinging to the pier, which, together with one who floated ashore, leaves seven unaccounted for, and it is feared they have been lost.

TEN LIVES LOST.

2 P. M.—The life-saving crew have succeeded in rescuing four persons, and it is now known that ten of those on the frail pier when the storm burst upon them were drowned.

FURY OF THE STORM.

The storm was one of great fury. It blew up very suddenly and the work of destroying the temporary structure was quick and complete. The men had no means of escape beyond one small boat, which is supposed to have gone adrift.

BLACKNESS OF NIGHT.

When the storm first struck the pier a number of unfortunate men were carried into the lake with the wreckage of their building, and were compelled to battle for their lives, with little to aid them beyond stray pieces of floating timber in the darkness of night. Few facts are obtainable at this hour, and only an outline of the disaster.

THE MERIDIAN CONGRESS.

French Jealousy Interfering With the Entire Success of the Meeting.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, D. C., October 8.—The indications regarding the work of the Meridian Congress are not of a very encouraging nature. The French gentlemen don't want England to scoop in all the honors by having Greenwich made the prime meridian on which all calculations shall be based, and as many of the others are willing to consent to this the English, of course, are not likely to give it up. The very large proportion of those having occasion to reckon longitude now use the meridian of Greenwich, only France, Denmark and Spain using local meridians in their commercial reckonings, though many of the astronomers of the world make their own observatories their meridians. In the commercial world, however, there are but four meridians much used: Greenwich, Paris, San Fernando and Copenhagen. As the very large majority use Greenwich, it is not probable that the French fight against it is likely to lead to the adoption of any other, unless it should be some point not now used by any, but equally satisfactory to all. Professor Cleveland Abbe, in an interview with your correspondent on this subject some time since, suggested that some meridian in the middle of the ocean might be selected, in order to avoid any national feeling. This idea may result in an agreement. Another, and probably more satisfactory plan, however, is suggested in the acceptance of the offer, said to have been made by the French delegate at Rome a year ago, that they would consent to Greenwich as the meridian, if the French metrical system of weights and measures should be adopted by the other nations. As Great Britain has already indicated a desire to adopt this system, and there have been indications that it might be accepted by all the nations, it may be that this congress, now jabbering uncertain French at the State Department, may yet bring a double blessing to the world in furnishing a common standard of weights and measures as well as a common meridian.

LABOR FEDERATION.

Strike Statistics for Four Months—The Eight-Hour Question.

CHICAGO, October 8.—The Federation of Trades and Labor Unions continued in session this morning. A telegram from the New Jersey Eight-Hour League, urging the Federation to consider the eight-hour question, was read and a reply returned that decided action would be taken. The legislative committee made an extensive report, in which it was contended that strikes, when based on justice and conducted with discretion, served a good end, although beneficial effects might not be immediately felt by those engaged in them. The strike statistics for the last four months numbered in the United States ninety-eight, affecting 53,000 employes. Of these strikes, fifty had been against a reduction of wages; seven for an increase of wages. The committee reported, in connection with the eight-hour question, that it had addressed the National Committees of both the Republican and Democratic parties, but had received no response. The committee believed it useless to wait for legislation, and the desired result was only to be attained by thorough organization among the workingmen.

STRIKES AND STRIKERS.

The Stove Moulders Score a Defeat—Affairs at Oliver Bros. and Phillips' Mill.

PITTSBURG, PA., October 8.—The strike of the stove moulders, which was inaugurated nine months ago, has been declared off, and all who can get work will return at a reduction of 15 per cent. The manufacturers have agreed to take the strikers back provided they make applications as individuals, and not as members of the Union. The employes of Oliver Bros. & Phillips' lower mill met this morning and decided not to return to work for less than $1 25 per day. This is 12½ cents per day more than the men were receiving when the reduction of 12½ per cent was ordered.

THE STATE CAPITAL.

New Banking Company—A Straight-Out Republican Nominee—Appointments.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, MO., October 8.—The Allen Banking Company of Harrisonville filed articles to-day; capital $40,000.

The Governor has appointed Fred V. Loos as County School Commissioner of Ralls County, vice James O. Allison, resigned.

Hon. N. C. Burch of this city, late editor of the State Journal, bears the dignity of his nomination for Secretary of State by the "Straight-out Republican" Convention at Macon with becoming modesty. He recently declined the nomination for County Attorney, and it may be possible that his yearnings for Secretary of State might be compromised by the tender of a nomination for the vacant County Clerkship of Cole County.

STRICKEN WITH APOPLEXY.

Death of Gen. John B. Murray, An Originator of Decoration Day.

SENECA FALLS, N. Y., October 8.—General John B. Murray, while receiving a banner for the Plumed Knights last evening was stricken with apoplexy and died this morning. General Murray was an enthusiastic Grand Army man and one of the originators of decoration day. He led first in the procession that marched to martial music to strew flowers upon the graves of soldiers.

Struck by the Train.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS., October 8.—A carriage containing George and Alice Hall of Hamford, Vt., was struck by the express train at Greylock Crossing last night and both occupants instantly killed. The young man's body remained on the engine pilot, while the body of the young lady was thrown 100 feet on a bank ten feet high.

THE CANDIDATES.

Another Instance of Blaine's Marvelous Memory—Logan in Delaware.

MASSILLON, OHIO, September 8.—Mr. Blaine, accompanied by Hon. William McKinley and by a long line of private carriages, drove over this morning from Canton to Massellon, eight miles. The scenery between the two places is very beautiful and, as the weather was fair, the carriage drive was a refreshing relief from railroad travel. Nearly all the houses and stores along the main street by which Massillon was entered, were beautifully decorated with Blaine and Logan flags and othe Republican emblems, and more than the whole population of the town seemed to be out to receive Mr. Blaine. Upon the programme was a procession composed of Republican clubs and manufacturing operatives from this part of Ohio. When, at a little after 11 o'clock, Mr. Blaine appeared upon the stand from which he was to review the procession, the clubs and other organizations were passing up to the point where they were to form in line, and as they passed the near stand they cheered for "Blaine and Logan and McKinley." Among those on the stand with Mr. Blaine, were Senator Cullom of Illinois, ex-Secretary Windham, Hon. Wm. McKinley and Hon. A. W. Tenney of New York. While Mr. Blaine was watching for the procession many of the people were presented to him, and many others presented themselves and insisted on shaking hands with "the next President," as they called. Among those who approached Mr. Blaine was an elderly gentleman whom he saluted with "How are you Euley? I am very glad to see you," Mr. Euley proved to be an old schoolmate of Mr. Blaine, whom he had not met since 1847. Before noon, and before the procession was ready to move, there was a heavy shower, which compelled the occupants of the stand to seek shelter and dispersed the crowd for a time.

Gen. Logan's Trip.

WILMINGTON, DEL., October 8.—The train bearing Gen. Logan arrived here at 11:50. Logan was accompanied by Gen. Beaver and a delegation of the Young Republican Club of Philadelphia. The party received cheers as they disembarked at the station. They were escorted to the opera house by the city Republican organization.

FOREIGN NEWS.

England.

LONDON, October 8.—A meeting of the Congregational Union of England and Wales was held in the City Temple last evening. Rev. Wm. Stacy of Canada, Dr. Bradford of New Jersey and Arthur Little of Chicago were present and made addresses. They were warmly welcomed by the union.

THE NEWMARKET RACES.

This was the third day of the Newmarket Second October meeting. The race for the Middle Park plate, for two-year-olds, was won by Lord Hastings' bay colt Melton, M. A. Lauphin's chestnut colt Xaintrailles, second. Capt. C. Bowling's colt and Mr. Chilwick's Royal Hampton ran a dead heat for third place. The betting was $10 to $1 against Melton; $7 to $1 against Xaintraille; $9 to $4 against Bowling's colt, and $25 to $5 against Royal Hampton.

BERLIN, October 8.—Edwin Booth, the American tragedian, will commence a series of representations in this city in February.

The Cholera.

ROME, October 8.—The reports of the cholera in Italy for the past twenty-four hours give a total of 198 fresh cases and 97 deaths.

The Dominion.

MONTREAL, October 8.—Bishop Fabre indorses the action of the Rev. Cure of Beauharnois in denouncing from the altar the establishment of a benevolent society entitled "The Catholic Union of Knights of St. John." He holds it touches upon a secret organization like Freemasonry. The expression of opinion on the part of the Bishop has created a profound sensation among a certain class of politicians here, notably amongst the ultramundanes.

The Soudan.

CAIRO, October 8.—The report that M. Herbin, the French consul at Khartoum, was with Col. Stewart at the time of the massacre by the Arabs and was among the killed is doubted here.

THE TEMPERANCE VOTE.

A Modest Estimate of Its Strength in Illinois by John D. Haggard.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL., October 8.—Said John D. Haggard, the State temperance organizer, to-day: "I honestly believe that during the past two weeks temperance people have been gaining strength in Illinois at a wonderful rate, much larger than one would suppose. I have no hesitation in saying that, in my judgment, the Prohibition party will poll over 20,000 if not 40,000 votes. I will look for 30,000, as the State has been so thoroughly canvassed that I know it will be safe in saying that number of votes will be polled."

SECURED A STAY.

An Associate of the Notorious Berner Given a Lease of Life.

CINCINNATI, OHIO, October 8—The District Court ordered a stay in the proceedings in the case of Joseph Palmer, to be executed Friday, for the murder of Kirk. They follow the ruling in a recent decision of the Supreme Court, which makes it imperative that all proceedings in error must first be passed on by the District Court before going before the Supreme Court, and this stay is to give time to consider an application for a writ of error which was made to them only this week.

DESPITE THE RAIN.

Another Big Crowd Attends the Fair To-Day.

All the Departments Crowded With Visitors From the City and Country—Awards of Premiums Made To-Day—Scenes on the Grounds—Notes.

The cold wave and moist atmosphere entered into a combination to-day, evidently to mar public interest in the Fair, but did not succeed. It would have been reasonable to suppose that the damp and almost frosty chilliness of the weather would affect the attendance, but such has not been the case. There are fully as many people on the grounds as there were yesterday, and the indications are that before dark several thousands more will flock to the grounds. As early as 7 o'clock, the cars of the various lines running to and from the grounds were packed with people, and at noon every department of the Fair was thronged with spectators. The early comers are nearly all country people, the city folks, as a rule, not putting in an appearance until the afternoon. Of the former there is an unusually large number. It would appear from this fact that Wednescay ought to be the big day instead of Thursday. Certainly, the mingling together of strangers and citizens at the great St. Louis Fair would be a pleasant feature and tend to render more friendly the relations between the two classes. The country people manifest a disposition to thoroughly enjoy themselves. Everything possesses some attraction for them, the men, of course, finding much to interest them in the fields, and the ladies drifting, like their metropolitan sisters, to the Textile Department to admire the magnificent displays of feminine finery. The marked success of the Fair is evidenced not only by the large attendance, but also by the general excellence and perfection of the numerous displays. Then, too, the visitors, notwithstanding the universal grumble about hard times, seem to carry well filled purses with loose strings. The booth-keepers, without a single exception, express themselves as well satisfied, and report business as good.

The work of making awards prospered slowly today, although the superintendents and their committees began their duties at an early hour.

The feature of the Fair, and the one apparently possessing more interest for the major portion of the crowd in attendance, is the horse exhibit in the amphitheatre. Each ring proves an excellent performance or exhibit. The programme for to-day was as follows: Exhibit of draft horses—Normans, Percherons, Clydesdale and English draft breeds; matched horses or mares for crrriage; horses of all work; model horse; fastest team; trotting premium; trotting mule race. During the ring performance a fitful, drizzling rain set in, but this did not prevent people from flocking to the ampitheater which was fairly crowded all the day. The indications are that to-morrow, big Thursday, will be a grand success.

THE AMPITHEATER.

Awards in the amphitheater were made this morning as follows: The first premium for 2-year-old Norman stallions was awarded to Dillon Bros. of Normal, Ill.; second premium to Murray Bros'. Prince. Dillon Bros'. Bonus G. was adjudged the best and Miller's Nordax the second best stallion of the same breed, under 2 years old. Dillon Bros'. Ida Vulgara took the first premium in the 3-year-old mare class; second premium to S. Miller's Pilot.

Ed. Hodgson's Margaret captured the blue ribbon in the two-year-old filly class, the second premium going to S. Miller's unnamed entry.

In the Norman filly ring S. Miller was awarded the first premium, Dillon Bros. getting the second.

In the English two-year-old stallion draft class, R. Holloway of Alexis, Ill., captured the first premium with the Clydesdale McCallow; second premium to Murray Bros'. Alpha.

In the yearling class Holloway's Cairnbrogie was adjudged the best and Hero the second.

Moffet Bros., of Paw Paw, Ill., secured first premium with Topsey and R. Holloway's Graham took second in the three-year-old mare class. R. Holloway took both ribbons in the two-year-old filly class and in the yearling class.

There were eleven splendid pairs of horses shown in the carriage class. W. Adams of Lexington, Ky., was awarded first premium, John T. Hughes of the same place, second.

MECHANICAL DEPARTMENT.

The following awards were made in the Mechanical Department this morning: Laclede Fire Brick Manufacturing Company, for fire bricks; Blackman H. Post, for sewer pipes; Blanke & Bros., for fancy candies; St. Louis Stamping Company, for granite ware; Famous Clothing Company, three awards for hats and caps and one award for trunks; L. Roos, for furs; Belleville Pottery Company, for pottery, four medals, and two $10 prizes and one diploma; Hoevel Bros., for china teapots and crocks; M. A. Pigott, for buggy and wagon tire; Wm. J. Kraushaar, three awards for gas fixtures and fancy street lamps.

A FINE DISPLAY.

One of the finest displays in the Fair Gronnds is that of the Excelsior Manufacturing Company. It is certainly ahead of anything in the stove line ever seen at the St. Louis Fair. The building has been newly painted, and numerous hanging baskets of beautiful flowers add to the attractiveness of the display. Many were the exclamations of admiration which greeted the complete line of the famous Charter Oak stoves which forms the body of their handsome display, which is further beautified by the presence of Boaz stove, the new soft-burner, which is meeting everywhere with popular favor, and their new surface burner, known as the Tariff. The famous wire gauze door, of which this company make a specialty, is being exhibited at the Prof. Horsford Baking Powder booth, where its efficacy is given practical demonstration by a cook, who, in a Charter Oak wire-gauze door oven, cooks during the whole day and supplies to the numerous crowds, free of charge, a very fine and, those who have been fortunate enough to get one say, a very eatable biscuit. This enterprising company, the quality of whose cooking stoves is known all over the United States, have, without a doubt, surpassed all their previous exhibits made at the St. Louis Fair, and the popularity of their cooking stoves is manifested by the throngs of people who are continually seen around their handsome booth.

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT.

The judges in the agricultural department, under the direction of Superintendent Thomas J. Kiely, began their labors last evening and made the following awards:

FAIR NOTES.

Captain Frangel reports that he has at the Fair Grounds police station a pocket book containing $35. It was found Tuesday evening by an officer.

The St. Joe brass band, composed of fine musicians and elegantly uniformed, complimented the newspaper offices by a splendid serenade this morning.

Among the interesting features of the Agricultural Department are the perfect traction machines.

A novel and curious exhibit in the Agricultural Department is an odd-looking ox cart made entirely of wood, without a nail or piece of iron.

A large number of fine entries have been made for the $700 trotting purse to-morrow.

THE RAILROADS.

Baltimore and Ohio's Attitude With Reference to the Pennsylvania.

A Matter Which Occasionl the Gravest Concern in Railway Circles—Reasonable Prospects of a Rate War of No Mean Proportions—The L. & N.'s New Issue of $5,000,000—A Scheme of Relief—Note and News.

BALTIMORE, October 8.—The Sun this morning says: "It is thought in some quarters that the complications which must ensue from this latest move of the Pennsylvania Railroad will be to the discomfort of that company as well as the east and west trunk lines generally. Their interests are so interwoven through the pooling agreement that such a matter as an attempt to shut one of the pool members out of New York will possibly bring disagreements. When the pool was made the Baltimore and Ohio was thought to have sure New York connections. It is argued that if the Baltimore and Ohio concludes to take the stand that the relations which made it desirable then to go into the pool exist no longer, that there will unquestionably be lively times, and evidences are said not to be wanting to indicate that a positive line of attack is being considered. The Baltimore and Ohio has a passenger line from Chicago to New York, called the Niagara Falls Short Line, running to Detroit and Buffalo, where passengers have the option of the Erie or West Shore to New York. Should this line commence to slash into the passenger rates, either of the lines would follow. No doubt, in the railroad war which the Baltimore and Ohio has been involved in, they were cut off from New York and used the steamships for their freights from Baltimore to New York. No one on the outside can foreshadow what the outcome of this matter is to be, but the developments will be watched with interest. It appears to be assured that the affair is looked upon as serious among railroad men."

New Issue of the Louisville and Nashville.

NEW YORK, October 8.—In the official circular of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company, just issued, the company simultaneously offers the stockholders $5,000,000 of 6 per cent 10-40 adjustment mortgage bonds and $5,000,000 of treasury stock, the offer being made under an agreement with the International Syndicate, which contracted for all the bonds and shares not subscribed for by the company's stockholders. The issue will be made simultaneously in London and Amsterdam. The bond issue will consist of 5,000 bonds of $1,000 each, with interest at 5 per cent, payable in May and November, repayable after forty years, with the option of the company to redeem at par any time after the expiration of ten years. The bonds will be dated October 2, 1884, and secured by a mortgage upon the lines. The stock consists of 50,000 shares in the company's treasury. The plan for the relief of the company provides that the stockholders shall have the privilege to subscribe for ten shares of treasury stock at 26 for each fifty shares standing in their names, and to a $1,000, 10-40, 6 per cent mortgage bond at 66. Both the stock and the bonds are deliverable November 6. Thus, for $920 they are offered $1,000 in bonds and a $1,000 worth of stocks.

Did Not Come Up.

BALTIMORE, MD., October 8.—At the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad to-day only the usual regular business was transacted. The differences between the Baltimore and Ohio and Pennsylvania Roads were not brought up.

Railway Notes.

Col. A. A. Talmage, general manager of the Wabash, left for the East this morning.

The figures of the people visiting the Fair published in yesterday's POST-DISPATCH are in the main correct. The Chicago and Alton figures were a little off, but aside from that road the numbers do not vary much

THE WESTERN UNION.

Annual Meeting of the Directors—President Green's Report—Cost of the Strike.

NEW YORK, October 8.—The stockholders of the Western Union Telegraph Company held their annual meeting to-day. The following directors were elected for the ensuing year by a unanimous vote: Norvin Green, Thos. T. Eckert, John T. Terry, John Van Horne, George D. Morgan (in place of Augustus Schell, deceased), Harrison Durkee, Jay Gould, Russell Sage, Alonzo B. Cornell, Sidney Dillon, Cyrus W. Field, George J. Gould, John Pender, M. P., Henry Weaver, Percy R. Pyne, Robert Lenox Kennedy, Hugh J. Jewett, J. Pierpont Morgan, Frederick L. Ames, John Hay, William D. Bishop, C. P. Huntington, George P. Roberts, Frank Work, Samuel Sloan, Erastus Wiman, John J. Astor, Chauncey M. Depew, James W. Clendenin and Abraham R. Vannest (in place of Christopher C. Baldwin, resigned). The annual report of President Norvin Green was submitted. It showed: The gross earnings showed an increase over those of 1883 by $118,000, but the expenses were much heavier, owing to the extraordinary expenses in maintaining the operating lines during the strike, the expenses being nearly $500,000. It is believed that the total loss by the strike was nearly $1,000,000. Through competing lines claim to have tapped seventy-five per cent of the Western Union's revenue, yet it appears to have lost nothing and has even increased its earnings. The report concludes as follows: "It is confidently believed by the management that we shall be able to maintain our revenues for the ensuing year, and with a material reduction of expenses, to yield a handsome increase of profits. Nevertheless, in view of the continuing necessity of extending our lines and adding wires to meet the growing demand of leased wires, and especially in view of the probable forced sale of a considerable amount of telegraph properties, which may be purchased for much less than the cost of production, it is recommended that the dividends be hereafter confined to a rate of 6 per cent per annum and a cash surplus accumulated in the treasury."

EXPENSES FOR THE YEAR.

Operating and general expenses, $9,278,000; rentals of leased lines, $1,842,000; maintenance and reconstruction, $1,350,000; taxes, $301,000; equipment of offices and wires, $249,000; total, $13,020,000.

That New Parish.

The report that there is to be a new Catholic parish has gained a wider circulation than there is basis for, as will be seen by the statements of a prominent Catholic to a POST-DISPATCH reporter to-day. "Such a story," said he, "has a decided Munchausen air about it. There is no need for any such parish for the simple reason that every church in the city is able to accommodate all its present members or those who may join for some time yet. The idea originated in the minds of a few who have no right or reason to do anything but keep it concealed. It has not been considered by the authorities as either probable or feasable for the simple reason that they have not deemed the matter worthy of their attention." Archbishop Kenrick has expressed himself in an equally decided manner, and is greatly displeased and annoyed that prominence should be given a rumor that has not the slightest foundation in fact.

Prepare for Frost.

The weather at 3 o'clock this afternoon was not at all favorable to a speedy clearing up. The barometer was rapidly rising, but the thermometer was going the other way, being 52° at that hour. A telegram from Washington says that frost is probable to-night from Michigan and Wisconsin to the Missouri Valley and the northwestward.

DISGUSTED VETERANS.

Survivors of the Mexican War in Convention To-Day.

The Reunion Called to Order After a Wait of an Hour and a Half in the Rain—Address of Welcome, and Other Proceedings—A Visit on 'Change—The Veterans Much Chagrined at the Local Committee's Neglect.

Ten o'clock this morning saw some two hundred Mexican veterans assembled in front of Pope's Theater awaiting the opening of the doors. According to the notice that had been made public, the reunion of the Veterans was to be called to order at 9 o'clock by the president of the association, Mr. James W. Denver. Accompanied by relatives and friends, the veterans assembled at the appointed time but were doomed to wait for an hour before closed doors. The committee of arrangements had failed to give the theater people proper notice, and hence the delay in getting the house lighted and ready for the heroes. At a quarter past 10, the stage manager arrived and quickly threw open the house, when the veterans filed slowly in to the inspiring air of the "Mexican Veterans' March," written for the occasion by Prof. Frank Gecks. The men as a body presented a fine appearance. In addition to the badge of membership which they all wore on the lapels of their coats, some were proudly decorated with bronze medals, which are made from the metal of guns captured during the war. The face side of these bronzes had the usual representations of battle scenes and the names of some of the principal fights, such as Vera Cruz, Tubasco, Buena Vista, San Pascual, etc., while the reverse side bore the names of the bearer and his regiment.

In the absence of President Denver, Gen. M. D. Manson, who is candidate for Lieutenant-Governor of Indiana, acting in his capacity of first vice-president, called the meeting to order at 10:30 o'clock.

General Manson announced, with regret, the absence of President Denver, and presented the Rev. Mr. Hogan, who made the opening prayer. At the conclusion of this and after some music by the band, Maj. Jas. C. McGinniss, who was to make the opening address of welcome, was introduced by General Manson. Major McGinniss prefaced his address by an apology for the negligence of the Committee of Arrangements and explained that the blame for the delay should not be attached to the theater people, but to the local committee.

MAJOR M'GINNISS

then proceeded to read an address which welcomed the veterans to St. Louis, and reviewed the events of the Mexican war. He spoke of the willingness of the men of this country to respond to the call of duty, and to expose their lives on the battle field for the cause of the Union. Politicians of to-day, he said, were inclined to belittle the importance of the Mexican war by calling it a picnic. He proceeded to refute this opinion by reviewing briefly what he considered the true results of the war. He portrayed the shattered condition both in body and worldly goods of some of the veterans, and remonstrated against the imputation of insignificance which the public of to-day is inclined to make against their actions during those trying campaigns of 1846-7-48.

He then spoke of the bond of sympathy which should, and which, in fact, does unite these heroes of bygone days, and urged that the sympathies and interests of each one should be considered common to all, so that they should be as one united brotherhood.

General Munson then responded from the chair, and after thanking Major McGinniss for his address proceeded to indulge in a few reminiscences of the war, mentioning with feeling the name of that great captain, Winfield Scott. The mention of this and other leaders' names touched the hearts of the old soldiers and they showed their sympathy by hearty applause. He said that Congress had passed four times a bill for the recognition of the pension list for Mexican veterans, but that the Senate had refused it each time. It had been loaded down each time with amendments which amounted to a refusal to pass it.

Gen. Manson then concluded his speech by welcoming all to their annual meeting.

Three cheers were then proposed for Maj. McGinniss and his address, and were given with a will.

was then announced as next in order, and all the vice-presidents were requested to come upon the stage and occupy seats there and in the boxes.

A motion was then made by Secretary Kennady to postpone the roll-call until to-morrow's session, for the reason that there were still many unregistered, and that if he were given till to-morrow he could then present a complete list of those present. The motion was seconded and unanimously carried.

The secretary then read a letter from Mr. D. R. Francis, President of the Merchants' Exchange, offering an invitation to visit the Exchange in a body.

The following committees were then appointed:

Committee on Organization—A. J. Robinson, of Ohio: O. P. H. Covey, of Indiana; C. McKenzie, of Illinois; Captain Murphree, of Mississippi; Daniel Coigy, of Tennessee; David Scannel, of Colorado; Ferris Forman, of Illinois.

Committee on Resolutions—General Cravens, of Indiana; A. Devinney, of Kansas; R. H. Malone, of Mississippi; J. C. McGinniss, of Missouri; C. F. Sargent, of Pennsylvania; Captain Creed, of Illinois; B. J. Wood, from Tennessee.

Committee on Order of Business—A. B. Pearson, St. Louis; Capt. Wheeler, St. Louis; Col. Don Morrison, St. Louis; Maj. Gilson, St. Louis; Capt. Spore, St. Louis; Alfred Grable, St. Louis.

It was then discussed as to how the time of the veterans shall be passed during their stay in the city, and a motion was made and carried that a regular programme shall be made out by the committee on arrangements. It was determined to accept Mr. Francis' invitation, and at 12 o'clock the meeting was adjourned and the soldiers repaired in a body to visit the halls of the Exchange.

ON 'CHANGE.

At about 12:15 o'clock martial strains were heard in the hallways of the Exchange, and after the members had formed themselves in groups to direct the incoming lines, the veterans, preceded by the band, entered and made a tour of the hall, grouping themselves on the platform on the west side. After the band had finished some patriotic airs, Mr. D. R. Francis introduced General Manson. After a few words of greeting to the merchants of St. Louis, this gentleman gave way to Mr. McFadden from Logansport. He made a very neat little speech, in which he referred to the prosperity of the Wabash Valley, which, he said, was distinguished for its wheat, pork and corn, and claimed for these productions the title of "king," which they deserved more than did cotton. He made reference, as did the succeeding speakers, to the shame that should be felt by the men in power, who to-day enjoy the benefits derived from the Mexican war, and are yet unwilling to reward the men who exposed their lives to contribute to the welfare of the country.

Colonel Love from Kentucky, the next speaker, said that he had come from the land of blue-grass, pretty women and good whisky, to greet once more his former companions in war.

After three cheers had been proposed and given by the veterans for the merchants of St. Louis, there were loud cries for Mr. J. L. D. Morrison. The colonel came forward and made an admirable little speech, in which he dwelt upon the sacrifices that the soldiers present had voluntarily made for their country, and deplored the fact that the sectional animosity in the halls of Congress had till now deprived the veterans of their just reward. He asked how much longer would the country go on ignoring the heroes' past services, when, at the sacrifice of everything that was dear to them, they contributed a golconda of wealth to the country and enabled commerce to be pushed to its present high state of development. The object of these annual reunions was not political in character, but simply to repeat their appeal to the sense of justice of the national legislators. The veterans will visit the Fair and Exposition this afternoon and return in time to review the local militia at the Lindell Hotel to-night at 8 o'clock.

RUNNING TO EXTREMES.

The Dainty Novelties That Will Adorn Pretty Heads.

The styles in head gear tend to extremes this year, and a lady to be in fashion must either have a sky scraper or a diminutive butter dish on her head. This is a fortunate arrangement for different types of beauty, the enormous bonnets being very becoming to some ladies, and the small ones quite suiting others. Country and city people are often puzzled to know just what to buy, and they frequently have to depend on the taste and judgment of the salesmen. The firm of B. Nugent & Bro. has become the arbiter of fashion in the city, and its stock of millinery is purchased and managed by one of the most experienced and able men in that line. The stock is the finest in variety, extent and quality ever seen in the West, all of the most beautiful novelties in shapes, colors, materials and trimmings being found there in the greatest profusion. Many of the styles to be found at Nugents' are from original designs, and cannot be duplicated elsewhere. There is one thing about the establishment which makes it deservedly popular. Any one can depend on what is obtained there being the very finest to be had anywhere. As far as prices are concerned, it is hardly necessary to state that the firm's enormous cash purchases and sales enables it to sell lower than any other house in the West.

LOCAL POLITICS.

The Gordian Knot in the Ninth District Still Uncut.

What Mr. Nathan Cole Thinks About the Situation—Candidates in the Eighth District—Judge Gottschalk as a Resigner—Campaign Notes.

The condition of the Republican party in the Ninth Congressional District is not one of unalloyed delight and confidence. The proposition of Dr. McLean that he will submit his candidacy to the arbitrament of a new primary election was talked over by the leaders of the party, and the impression seemed to be general that the good Doctor was up to some unchristian game. It was conceded that Brown was out of the race and could not be lured back into the contest, and the question naturally arose whether Dr. McLean would let anybody but Brown try conclusions with him in the primary. The general opinion was that he wouldn't.

Dr. McLean was sought by a reporter, but was not found. One of his supporters, however, stated very emphatically that the Doctor's proposition was addressed to Mr. Brown, not to any candidate that the "soreheads" might choose. McLean's case seems to be that Mr. Brown's friends claim that the defeat of their candidate was achieved unfairly, and the Doctor is willing to give Brown another chance. The Doctor is not willing, however, to let go of a nomination which has cost him a great deal of anxiety and sleeplessness for the purpose of letting his enemies see if they can find a stronger man than Brown to pit against him. Mr. Brown was seen, but declined to say anything whatever about Dr. McLean. It is understood, however, by his friends, that he is permanently out of politics. It was stated some days since in this paper that an effort was being made to get Nathan Cole to run, and a visit was made to him. He said: "My name has, I know, been mentioned, but I have told my friends that I did not want to make the race. I could ill afford the time and attention necessary, and I believe that the idea of my candidacy has been abandoned."

"But do you altogether decline to make the race under any circumstances?"

"That would be foolish. No man can tell what circumstances might arise, but I am entirely honest in saying that I do not want to run, and I could only be a candidate at the sacrifice of business interests which require my constant care."

"Do you believe that McLean can beat Glover?"

"No."

"Have you told him so?"

"No, I have not. I have not seen the doctor for some time, and I would naturally feel a delicacy in approaching him on such a subject."

"Do you believe McLean will permit anybody but Brown to appear against him at the primaries which he proposes?"

"I don't know anything about it. I believe that Dr. McLean's proposition is made in good faith for the purpose of uniting the district, and that if he is convinced that the best interests of the party require another candidate he would submit."

"What would be the effect of an independent race?"

"If a Republican runs independently Glover is altogether certain of election. If a good Democrat enters the field McLean will surely win."

"Who would you suggest as a candidate to take McLean's place?"

"J. G. Chapman. I don't believe there could be any reasonable doubt of his election. He is a well-known gentleman, a good business man, a general favorite throughout the district, and, indeed, he combines more elements of success than any man I know of."

It seems that there is a very strong movement on foot to get Mr. Chapman into the race again and to get Dr. McLean out. Several prominent Republicans are to-day to interview McLean as to his willingness to submit his candidacy at a primary election against any gentleman who may choose to run against him, and if he consents, it is highly probable that the anti-McLean party will unite on Chapman and do all in their power to pull him through.

GOTTSCHALK AND THE REPUBLICANS.

There is a great deal of doubt as to who will be Mr. Gottschalk's successor on the city Republican ticket as candidate for Public Administrator, a function made vacant by Gottschalk's resignation as a candidate. Mr. Gottschalk is said to have become entirely convinced that he could not beat Mr. Tittman at the polls, and hence has thrown up the sponge before the fight was well begun. Two years ago Mr. Gottschalk also resigned after nomination against Judge Woerner for Judge of the Probate Court. It is said that Mr. John O'Brien's name will be put on the ticket against E. C. Tittman. Mr. O'Brien is one of the United States Internal Revenue Inspectors, and will not attempt a serious canvass. It has been given out that Judge Gottschalk is to be made Judge of one of the United States Circuit Courts upon the next vacancy.

THE EIGHTH DISTRICT.

The Eighth District Republicans having been orphaned by the withdrawal of Henry Pins, are casting about for a candidate. The name of Mr. Henry C. Meyer has been mentioned for the honor. Mr. Meyer is said to be a good man, weighing a great many pounds, but his chances of beating Mr. O'Neill are not good enough to get odds in betting his way. Mr. John Grogan's friends are trying to see their way to an independent nomination and a Republican indorsement. Andy Brown is also trying for a Republican indorsement, so that small as are the benefits to be derived from a Republican nomination, there are people who will accept it.

POLITICAL NOTES.

A mass-meeting was held at the Soulard Market Hall last night for the purpose of organizing a Blaine and Logan Club. One hundred and twenty members signed the roll. The following officers were elected: President, Jac Nickel; vice-president, Wm. Zachritz; secretary, Charles F. Vogel; assistant secretary, Wm. Appel; treasurer, Jacob Vogel. The next meeting is to be held Friday evening at 8 o'clock.

THE PROPHET'S GUESTS.

How the Immense Crowds were Lodged at the Hotels.

The crowds at the hotels last night reached the estimate which had been placed on them yesterday. Every house of entertainment was filled to the brim, and many of them had trouble to find accommodations for their guests. The cold wave took the hotel men by surprise, and they were totally unprepared to substitute comforts demanded by late arrivals in place of the thin covering provided. It also caught the visitors by surprise, and many who were sweltering in seersuckers yesterday were shivering in all they could scrape together of summer garments this morning. The registers of the hotels ran along at from ten to twenty pages at all of the caravansaries. There was general satisfaction at the way in which the throngs of guests were handled. There never has been a Veiled Prophet's night on which there were not plenty of persons compelled to sleep on chairs and boxes for lack of lodgings, but the superior facilities of the hotels and the admirable efforts of the Bureau of Information greatly diminished the number of uncomfortables, and no one suffered in this way except through his own fault. A general investigation of the hotels and boarding-houses gives a result in excess of anything ever known here before. This morning, instead of the usual hegira, there was a disposition on the part of the visitors to remain several days in the city, and a large number of new arrivals were on hand. The added attraction of the Exposition keeps those who come to see the pageant from hurrying off as they usually do. The hotelmen, therefore, are looking for a continuation during the week of the overflow of strangers.

A trip through one of the principal hotels last night was really a sight worth viewing. A POST-DISPATCH reporter was shown the arrangements for the rush by a clerk at the St. James. The billiard-room was packed with single beds, with just space enough between them for one person to move sideways. Each room was filled with cots besides the regular beds. The parlors had beds and cots in them and every available inch of the halls was utilized in the same way. Early this morning one could scarcely walk through the hotel without stepping on a sleeper who was trying to catch a few hours of rest before beginning another day of sight-seeing and enjoyment. The hotels reminded of nothing less than vast hives of human beings. The best apartments were given to the ladies and the men were compelled to take what they could get.

BELLEVILLE.

Injured by a Gun Explosion—A Boy's Terrible Crime—Notes.

Thomas Steiner, a farm hand employed at Bohl's farm, was taken to St. Luke's Hospital this afternoon, where he had the four fingers of his left hand amputated. Steiner purchased a gun in St. Louis yesterday, and took it out on the farm to try it this morning. The gun exploded at the discharge of the first load, a piece of the barrel striking Steiner's left hand, rendering amputation of the fingers necessary. He received several other cuts and bruises about the body, but his injuries are not considered dangerous.

Garfield Lodge, Knights of Pythias, meet this evening for work in the first rank.

John A. Logan is announced to address a Republican mass meeting here October 30.

R. A. Moore has been appointed purchasing agent at the County Farm, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of P. J. Dreher.

A freight and coal train collided on the L. & N. Road near Birkner Station last evening, wrecking a few coal cars. The accident was caused by an open switch.

James O'Grady, an employe of the Rodgers foundry, was jailed last evening on a charge of carrying concealed weapons. The union and non-union employes of the foundry have not acted in harmony for some time past, and as O'Grady is a non-union man, he deemed it necessary to carry a loaded revolver to protect himself. The complaint was lodged by a union man, Justice Baumann tried the case, but will not render a decision till next Thursday.

Albert Schroeder, the 4-year-old child of Henry Schroder, died last evening from the effects of poisonous berries which the child found in his father's yard and ate.

Two passenger trains on the Cairo Short Line Road collided last evening at Wilderman Station. Two sleeping coaches and an engine were badly wrecked, but no one was badly injured.

James Bradley and Michael Brazil indicted for highway robbery were arraigned for trial in the Circuit Court this afternoon. Last July the defendants and a few companions who have escaped arrest, stopped two young men in East St. Louis and robbed them of a shot gun and a small sum of money. Upon advice of their attorney they pleaded guilty, and were sentenced to one year each in the Penitentiary. Another charge of a similar nature against the defendants was removed from the docket.

August Grieff, an old man nearly 60 years of age, is on trial in the Circuit Court this afternoon on a charge of criminally assaulting a girl of 14 years, named Marie Mansfield. The girl resides with her parents in East St. Louis, and on an afternoon about four months since she was met in a lonely part of the city by Grieff and assaulted. The girl was dangerously injured in her struggles but finally escaped. Grieff escaped to St. Louis, where he was arrested a few weeks since. The evidence against him is very strong and his conviction is assured.

Fritz Zimmermann, a lad of 14 years, residing at Shiloh, is wanted for as bold a criminal assault as was ever committed in this county. Yesterday morning Christine Hilderbrandt, a girl of 12 years, residing near Shiloh, was working in her father's field with her mother and another female relative. The girl had occasion to go about one hundred yards from her mother when she was approached by young Zimmermann, who without loss of time tied a handkerchief about the little girl's mouth. Mrs. Hilderbrandt noticed the struggle between her daughter and the boy, but, thinking it only childish sport, paid no attention to it till the girl ran towards her and was again knocked down by young Zimmermann. It required the united exertions of the two women to pull the young scamp away from his thoroughly frightened victim. Zimmermann was allowed to escape, but, as his parents reside in Shiloh, and he is well known, his arrest will not be a difficult matter.

The case of G. W. Seiber, the defaulting County Treasurer, was set for hearing in the Circuit Court to-day, but was not called on account of Seiber's sickness. The case will be reset for hearing at the present term of court.

The Young Men's Christian Association met last evening and adopted a constitution and by-laws.

The new park of the Belleville Base-ball Club will be open next Sunday.

Robert Allison was jailed last evening on a charge of assault and battery preferred by James O'Grady.

A Curious Case.

John, alias Mary, Williams, a physical wonder, is in custody at the Central District Police Station awaiting trial on a charge of appearing on the streets in male attire. The prisoner claims that fines have been imposed on him or her for wearing female attire, and, having been made defendant to both charges now wants to know if the law will sanction appearing on the streets in a state of nudity. Williams has been arrested several times in very bad company, and is only two months out of the Work House, which time was spent at the Jefferson Barracks. Dr. Dorsett, who made an examination, has been called upon to testify that the male attire worn by the prisoner was contrary to sex.

Death of Major Childress.

Maj. John W. Childress of Murfreesboro, Tenn., died at his home of paralysis yesterday at the advanced age of 80 years. He was the father of Mrs. Gov. J. C. Brown, and the daughter with her, the deceased's grand-daughter, Miss Daisy Brown, were at the deathbed. Maj. Childress was the brother-in-law of Ex-President James K. Polk, and was one of his earliest associates. It is said of Maj. Childress that he was one of the most assiduous and efficient of the promoters of Mr. Polk's political career. Governor Brown's family will return to this city in a few days.

Nailing Neumeister.

It is understood that Contractor Neumeister has the lowest bid in for the Mullanphy street and the Eastern avenue fire engine houses, and it is the earnest desire of several city officers, including the Chief of the Fire Department, that, in case Neumeister gets the contract, some stringent order be made as to the time allowed for completing these houses, as they are needed immediately. Chief Sexton, Delegate J. M. Sullivan, and several others are disgusted with Neumeister's job on the Third street and Washington avenue Engine House, and say they can discover no cause for his delay.

A Crowded Hold-Over.

This morning the hold-over at the Four Courts contained thirty prisoners arrested on suspicion. John Williams, Frank Connors, John Moran, James Mahon, James O'Neill, Fred Mahafey, Frank Brown, Edward Dean, Bill Jones, George Owens and Matt Ryan were photographed for the Rogues' Gallery, and will be sent to the Police Court as pickpockets arrested at Fifth street and Washington avenue last night.

CARONDELET JOTTINGS.

There will be a Blaine and Logan Club meeting at Druids' Hall to-morow evening.

George Pemberton, for being drunk, and Antoine Barada, for disturbing the peace, paid costs in the Police Court to-day.

CRIMINAL BREVITIES.

For an assault on John Connor, John J. Burk was sent to Jail for sixty days.

Austin Blackwell was held to-day in bond of $1,500 for a criminal assault on Louise Ward.

Joseph Ackrell was sent to Jail for six months by Judge Noonan this morning for abandoning his wife.

Wm. Tracy, who had a preliminary hearing on an accusation of burglary and larceney, was discharged on the evidence.

James Carroll was examined to-day on a charge of assault to kill and was acquitted in the Court of Criminal Correction.

Henry Kine, by consent, pleaded guilty to petit larceny for the theft of a gold watch from Louise Hughes and was sentenced to thirty days in Jail.

AT 11 o'clock to-day Sylvester Hays was arrested by Detectives Badger and Flynn. Hays had a fine suit of black clothes which he was trying to dispose of at a second-hand store at Ninth and Morgan streets.

Commercial Notes.

The visible supply according to New York report, shows an increase of 2,074,000 bu. in wheat, and 482,000 bushels in corn and a decrease of 808,000 bu. in oats, and 414,000 bushels in rye for the past week. For same time last year wheat increased 1,559,000 bushels, and corn decreased 652,000.—A New York exporter says that not one cargo of red winter wheat is on passage for the United Kingdom, so a private telegram states.—There was more noise and "monkey business" (vide the Hon. Geo. Bain) in the pit than actual trading. The "boys" hadn't got over last night altogether. A visitor, who stood on the steps and watched the "violent frivolities" going on, remarked in explanation to a friend, "Well, I guess they haven't sobered down yet."—There will be no session of the Merchants' and Cotton Exchanges to-morrow, both adjourning over Thursday in commemoration of "Fair Day." The POST-DISPATCH will be without its usual markets reports on that day.

The Markets.

FORENOON SESSION. CLOSING 1 P. M.

Wheat went off in value from the opening, influenced in part by corn, but receipts were very fair, too, which helped the bearish feeling. Cables were quiet, but cargoes of red winter were 3d higher, and the seaboard markets held up right well. At the lower rates there was more of a demand than there were offers to sell, and following the early decline came a right sharp reaction. But it failed to hold, for there followed a weakening off that after the noon call carried prices down to the lowest points of the session. Late there was a small recovery, but the close was ¼c below yesterday. October sold at 79¼ and year was offered at that, 79 bid. November opened at 80¼, sold up to 81, off to 80⅛@80⅝, back to 81 and down to 80⅛, closing at 80⅝. December opened at 83, sold at 83¼, then declined, and on first call sold at 82⅝@83¼, advanced to 83½, weakened off to 82⅛ and closed at 82¾. May sold at 93⅛ to 92⅝. The cash market was quiet, and but little changed in value, ruling about steady. No. 2 red 79¼@79 regular, 79¼ E side; No. 3 red 69⅝@69½ this and 70⅛@70 E side; No. 4 61⅛ in St. L., 68 bid for V. and A., 68½ for E. and U.; rejected 54½ in St. L. and C.; 55 in V.; No. 2 Mediterranean 78 regular, 78½ in D., 79 in Valley; No. 3 do 71 in Valley.

Corn broke away in price after a rather firm opening, the change to colder weather and a largely lower Chicago depressing the market, but from this there was a stiff recovery, and though the feeling was rather unsettled subsequently there was no weakness, and the close was firm and ½c above yesterday's close. November opened at 40⅜c, declined to 40⅜, advanced to 41⅛ and closed at 40⅞. Year opened at 36¼, sold off to 35¼@35⅞ and up to 36⅛, finally closing at 36¼ bid. January sold at 34¼ to 34⅝. May ranged from 36⅜ early up to 36⅞, and latter was bid at close. October was offered at 51, with 56⅝ bid. Cash No. 2 mixed was lower and dull, but the other grades advanced and were in demand. No. 2 mixed 50 regular, 51½ in Valley; No. 2 white mixed 57 in St. L. and later 54 bid for C., 59 for St. L.; rejected do 56 in St. L.; rejected 47@47½ in U., 47½ in C., 48 in St. L.; no-grade 45 in St. L., 46 bid for V.

Oats—Futures were dull but firmer, and salable at a slight advance. Year sold at 26½ to 26⅝, and that was all the trading. October was offered at 26⅜, bid 26⅛; November at 26⅝, bid 26¼; December at 27⅜, bid 27⅛; May at 30 @⅛, bid 29⅞@30. Cash grades were weaker but in demand: No. 2 25½ in D., 26⅛ in C., St. L. and V., 26@26⅛ for E.; rejected 24 in C. and U., 24½ in St. L.; No. 2 white 27½ bid for E.

Rye was neglected so far as grades were concerned. The only sale was by samples at 51.

Barley—Dull and unchanged, though with the change in the weather dealers look for an improvement in trade. A couple round lots fancy sold at 75. Quotations are as follows: Rejected 40; No. 3 to prime 45@50; choice 65@70; fancy 75@77½.

Flour—Demand light and the market slow and quiet, but not quotably changed, sales being made upon the following: We quote: Fine, superfine and x nominal at $2@2 25; xx $2 20@2 35; xxx $2 45@2 55 family $2 70@2 80; choice $3 25@3 35; fancy $3 75@3 85; extra do $3 90@4 15; patent $4 50@4 90. Flaxseed—Firm and in demand at $1 30.

Castor Beans—Prime salable at $1 90.

Cotton.

Spots were weak on this side in sympathy with the decline at Liverpool. Speculative markets also, taking their tone from foreign advices, were lower and a small business was done at the decline. Liverpool closed firm at an advance, and New York and New Orleans, although recovering some, were still a little below last night's closing. In the local market the tone was steady during the session, the demand fair and sales were over 700 bales.

LOCAL SPOT QUOTATIONS—Low ordinary 6⅝; ordinary 7¾; good ordinary 9¼; low middling 9⅝; middling 9¾; good middling 9⅞; middling fair 10⅛. Stained—Low middling 9; good ordinary 8¼; middling 9¼.

CATTLE—The market was fairly well supplied this morning and trade opened up briskly at stiff and well sustained prices. The proportion of really good cattle of any description was very small, the most of the receipts consisting of thin range cattle and mixed natives. Interior and Eastern shippers were on hand early, but during the early hours trading was done principally by local butchers and retailers, who purchased more freely than at any time this week and paid good prices for what they got. A good feeling marked the trade, but there was considerable disappointment at the very small number of really good cattle, and especially natives, which were wanted and would have brought strong prices. We quote:

HOGS—The supply on sale this morning was small, and under the combined operations of the different classes of buyers, who were well represented and all desirous of purchasing, soon cleared up at strong prices, Yorkshire being quoted at $5@5 25, mixed to good packing $4 90@5 15 and butchers to choice $5 25@5 50. The quality was not very good, and, taking this fact into consideration, values might be considered stronger if anything than those ruling the day before.

BLAINE ought to call a Court of Honor.

THE Globe-Democrat says: "It ought to be very easy to name a man who would beat both GLOVER and MCLEAN." All we have to say is that things are not as they ought to be.

WHILE BLAINE is shaking hands with the boys in Ohio his own electors are shaking him in New York, Mr. FORREST asks to be excused from serving as a Blaine elector.

GENERAL BEALE'S daughter was one of the wise young women of her generation. She has married an editor, and will henceforth employ a special police force to guard her diamonds.

BY weekly predictions continued through a prolonged term of hot weather, the Signal Service has at last made a hit on a cold wave. Full particulars of the accident will be given to the public as soon as they are obtainable.

THE Globe-Democrat is mistaken in saying that "there is just one man whom JOHN M. GLOVER can beat for Congress, and that is Money-bags MCLEAN, M. D." Mr. GLOVER can beat any two men the Republicans can put up.

ONE of the immediate effects of the cold wave of yesterday was the collapse of the Bowman and Priest boom in favor of LINDLEY in the Ninth District. Upon examination, the boom was found to be badly blighted and the call was recalled.

DR. MCLEAN is so charmed with the result of SAM HAYS' Court of Honor that he proposes now to submit the question of his nomination to a committee of three friends of his own choosing. If they report that he is all right he will stick; if they report otherwise, he will stick anyhow.

WE cannot but admire the courage of those Prohibitionists of the Eighteenth Illinois District who met yesterday in East St. Louis, to nominate a member of Congress. At the same time we must say that we do not consider that Mr. MOORE'S chance of figuring in the Congressional directory is a good one.

THE information that the converted Parrott gun which exploded on the Standish yesterday during practice at Annapolis is the third of those guns which has recently exploded will astonish a great many people who did not know that we had three guns in the navy. These guns probably represent some job with the Cold Spring or South Boston Foundry.

THE only thing needed to emphasize the political stupidity of the Republican party in Missouri was the attempt of a few well-meaning but misguided Republicans to hold a "straightout" convention at Macon. There was no convention, for a convention is a representative body, and the gentlemen who met yesterday represented nothing but themselves. They had no credentials, they have no organization, and they cannot hope to carry out any positive purpose. All that they can do is to contribute their little mite to weaken and distract that general anti-Bourbon sentiment which might have accomplished something good for the State if it had had as much sense in action as it had merit in its purpose.

A PIECE of old junk used on the United States steamer Standish as a gun burst all to pieces yesterday, while the cadets of the Annapolis Naval Academy were firing it at a target. We believe that JOHN ROACH is not responsible for the guns with which our navy is armed, but it is evident that the Ordnance Bureau of the navy has a repair shop somewhere in its outfit to compete with JOHN ROACH in the absorption of the naval appropriations. This Standish gun was an old Parrott that had been converted into a steel-lined breech-loader, and it seems that the liability of this class of guns to burst was so notorious in the navy that the officer in command had the cadets all out of range of the flying fragments on this occasion and nobody was hurt.

ONLY a few thousand poll-tax receipts have been issued in Philadelphia, and the Times of that city is greatly exercised over this indication that most of her citizens do not regard the privilege of voting as worth fifty cents apiece to them. It admits that they are simply saving the money, because they know that the campaign committees will pay the tax for them if they do not pay it themselves. But in this course the Times sees the demoralization of elections and the downfall of Republican institutions, which, in its opinion, seem to rest altogether upon the restriction of the right of suffrage to those who are willing to pay a stipulated sum for it every year. "A man who is not sufficiently interested in the welfare of his country to be willing to pay a trifling tax, and pay it himself, is not likely to cast either an intelligent or an honest vote," says the Times, "and should not be allowed to cast any vote at all." Now this dogma in regard to voting, if true and sound at all, is true and sound when applied to various men according to the various interests they have at stake and the varying values they can afford to attach to a vote. If a poor laborer with a family to support and educate, and no property but his labor to protect, can afford to pay fifty cents a year for a poll-tax receipt entitling him to vote, a GOULD or a VANDERBILT could afford to pay $100,000 for a vote, and it is not fair or just that either of them should get the right to vote as cheap as the poor loboring man. On the other hand, if we put the price of a single vote to a poor man as low as fifty cents, because it is not worth any more to him, why should our laws withhold from VANDERBILT the right to buy votes by the thousand according to his means and the interest he has in the election? We all recognize the fairness of apportioning votes in a joint stock company according to the shares owned by each stockholder, but the absurdity of basing suffrage upon any arbitrary property qualification was long since abandoned in our political system. To levy any tax or by law to put any price or money value whatever on the privilege of voting, involves all the absurdities of the most abitrary and illogical property qualification test. It turns the ballot box into the meanest kind of a machine for extorting unfair taxes from the patriotic poor, or disfranchising them. It never has worked well anywhere, because it is a hindrance to that free, independent voting which is the life and soul of our system.

THE COURT OF HONOR.

The settlement of the differences between Messrs. HAYS and BROWN by the high arbitrament of a Court of Honor, puts St. Louis far in the lead of America as a city of ideas. By the new process it is possible to put a charge of corruption into the hopper and get a grist of compliments and good will absolutely edifying as a result. That this system will be popular no man can doubt. Our neighbors to the north of us used to complain of the homicidal tendencies of the Missourian. How false and columnious such a charge appears in the light of this new dispensation! and how sweet and lamblike it will be to dwell in a community where the reign of law is so firmly established. Hereafter when John Jones alleges in the heat of debate that Thomas Robinson was mean enough to embezzle coppers from the eyes of a defunct pauper, it will no longer be the proper thing for Robinson to smite Jones upon his maxillary process. That will, by common consent, be regarded as brutal, vulgar, and lacking efficiency as an argument that he did not get away with the property in dispute. The two gentlemen will submit their their differences to Messrs. John Smith, James Williams and George Johnson, who will hear all the evidence in the case, examining such witnesses and documents as may be brought before them in executive session.

This being done, the Court will prepare a report, which will show that THOMAS ROBINSON not alone did not steal the coppers from the eyes of the dead man, but on the contrary furnished two silver quarters out of his own pocket for the purposes of mortuary decency, and that his conduct throughout the trying circumstances in which he was placed was of a character to add luster not alone to himself, but to the community which he has graced with his presence. They will state further that Mr. JNO. JONES' charge, albeit founded upon a mistake, was an evidence of his Roman virtue in striving for the Best and Noblest in Politics and Society at the cost of wringing his own heart by criticising his dearest friend, and that no encomium could be too high on the sterling character of JONES. They will go further and find that the pauper in the case was a most respectable man, who had sunk into poverty by a beautiful trust in his fellows, which, although it culminated in misfortune for himself, was to be admired as showing the noble, broad nature of the dead.

Thus the old order changeth, yielding place to new. The Court of Honor takes the place of the libel suit, of the scrapping match, of the retort direct and of the other now obsolete form of campaign controversy. It is so obviously suited to the needs of the age that we predict its general adoption. How much better it would have been if BLAINE had called a Court of Honor! How much stronger would MCLEAN'S candidacy appears if he had settled the controversies of his convention by a Court of Honor instead of an appeal to the razor and the revolver? This thing is bound to take. It is the idea of the day, the need of the times, and we insist that when the world recognizes its value, it will also recognize that it rose out of the turbid politics of Missouri.

THE METROPOLITAN PRESS.

What the Editors of the New York Journals Are Saying To-Day.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, October 8.—The WORLD says: "All the press reports sent out from the Blaine hippodrome are tinted with rose color. Mr. Blaine carries the press reporter along in his private car. He throws his eye over the dispatches before they are sent, and inasmuch as the purpose of this excursion is to work up public sentiment, it is safe to say that they contain more or less exaggeration. Our private advices are to the effect that the Blaine parade is bringing a rather slim return for the capital invested."

THE SUN.

The Sun says: "Some of our esteemed cotemporaries are much horrified by Mr. St. John's wicked conduct in making speeches on Sunday. This seems to them a wanton violation of the Sabbath, such as must receive the disapproval of religious people. But it is likely that even the strictest Sabbatarians will agree that if St. John never breaks Sunday in any other way than by making temperance speeches, he keeps the day as well as any of his critics do."

THE TIMES.

The Times says: "We note that Mr. Blaine has not as yet complied with Mr. Beecher's suggestion to submit the narrative, as he tells it, to Mr. Joy for confirmation or denial. Yet we do not doubt that Jay Gould would send it over to London on a dead-head message if Blaine dared to have it sent."

THE TRIBUNE.

The Tribune says: "The men who are out of employment in the mining and manufacturing regions in Ohio have just cause for complaint. They are right in feeling that some one has wronged them. They are right if burning information impels them to find out by whom they have been wronged. But the man who has sustained such an injury owes it to himself, to his own interests and to his self-respect, not to be mistaken, not to help or reward those from whom he has suffered."

THE SWAN OF AVON.

Shakspeare's Poesy the Theme of the Pageant.

A Multitude of People do Honor to the Prophet of Khorassan.

The Streets of St. Louis Turned Into a Blaze of Light and Beauty.

The Veiled Prophets and Their Ball at the Merchants' Exchange—A Dream of Splendor and a Night of Revelry—The Scenes and Incidents of the Grandest Pageant of the Century—How the Procession Started, Its Progress and Its End—The History of a Night.

Last night was the City of St. Louis given up to the suzerainty of the Royal Prophet of Khorassan. Once more the mysterious potentate of Khorassan visited his loyal people, and once more was a pageant seen upon the streets of the metropolis, the like of which had never before gladdened the eyes of onlookers outside of Fairyland.

When the history of the Mississippi Valley comes rightly to be written the progresses of the mysterious monarch will form no small part of the record, and in that list the story of last night's revels will lead as the supreme effort.

It has been known for a long time that within the bowels of the earth a treat was being prepared for mortals which would be of unparalleled splendor, of bewildering wonder, when it was unveiled to human ken, and hence through the length and breadth of the valley the subjects of the Veiled Prophet hastened to his capital city of St. Louis to honor his great ruler with their attendance and see for themselves his splendor. All the week, from every point of the compass, every road leading into St. Louis has been lined with pilgrims making their way to the Mecca of America in the immense caravans furnished by the railway companies. Day after day throngs of people have come through our gates and crowded the great caravansaries and houses of public hospitality wherewith the city is full, and day after day the one topic upon every tongue has been the pageant wherewith the streets were to be transfigured. Along the line which his highness was to pass, the loyal city burned thousands upon thousands of flambeaux, turning night into day, and by the soft radiance of innumerable points of light limning out in the darkness a path of lambent fire along which the Veiled one was to progress. This illumination itself formed one of the prettiest features of the night. Seen from the street it seemed that great tunnels of light stretched away to the vanishing point in long converging lines of blazing gas. Even the lighting of the globes called forth the plaudits of the multitude as the lighter swung on his airy derrick in and out of the maze of glass globes and gas pipe.

Where the light was thickest the crowd was thickest, and, hence, on Washington avenue, on Fourth and Fifth streets, the throng was but a massed, packed, struggling, good-natured sea of humanity. Every foot of space on the pavement and out on the street as far as the police would let the tide of people roll supported a man, a woman or a child. The most democratic freedom prevailed, everybody talked to everybody else and joked about everybody else upon everything that passed, whether it was a bakery wagon, a policeman or a float in the procession. Comment was free and open and general; everybody was in the best possible humor, everybody had come out for the special purpose of being amused, and, as a result, everybody was happy. Extempore seats had been improvised all along the route, and there was much cheerful guying between those sitting down and those standing below. The Veiled Prophet is the only potentate who could spread gladness and joyousness through so many hearts. Every one was happy, delighted with the crowds, with the myriad lights, with the bunting flaunting aloft, with the beauty and sparkle of the scene, and, most of all, with the gorgeousness and unexpected magnificence of the pageant itself, which was unique even among the efforts of the Veiled Prophets.

No theme could be more fortunate than Shakespeare, none wherein there were more of those possibilities which the Prophets know so well how to use their best. Shakespeare, "the myriad-minded," is in himself the source and fountain head of almost all the poesy and fancy that form the legend of the English race. To him go we for beauty, art, imagination and the play of fantasy, and no one goes to him to come back empty handed. The Veiled Prophet is no exception to the rule. Here upon the streets were the prettiest dreams of the immortal bard of Avon materialized into visible beauty and form, as though by the touch of an enchanter's wand. The forest of Arden, medieval England and Italy were put bodily before the people.

THE START FROM THE DEN.

Although His Royal Mightiness did not get his immense retinue in line at the exact hour appointed, nevertheless he did not overtax the patience of the multitude. Large crowds of men, women and children had assembled in the vicinity of Twelfth and Chestnut as early as a quarter-past 6 o'clock and stood for an hour and a half with craned necks and strained eyes eager to catch a glimpse of the brilliant glory they knew to be inclosed within the dark walls of the den. They surged out to the middle of the streets and were slowly pushed back again to the edge of the sidewalk by the police. They laughed and whooped and shouted at every little incident of unusual occurrence. A fence had been erected across Chestnut street to prevent all vehicles from passing in that direction, and every benighted driver that approached it was yelled at and hooted by the crowd. "Get back there, you're on the wrong track!" "Drive that untamed steed through the alley!" "You had better get him some oats!" and a dozen other ejaculations were hurled at him while a policeman stood in front of him waving him back with his baton. One end of the den had been torn down and large sheets of canvass hung over the opening, so that at the proper moment an easy exit could be effected. As these pieces of canvass were pulled aside for a moment to admit some one or permit him to pass out, a flood of light burst through the opening lighting up the faces of the swaying multitude and affording a short glimpse of the fairy-land within. These sudden glimpses invariably caused a sudden outburst of admiration and applause. About 7:15 o'clock 200 negro attendants, clad in black and red and carrying the lamps that were to illuminate the floats, were placed in line along Lucas square. To the west of the den the horses of the Transfer Company, clad in their red and white blankets, bearing the letters "V. P." on the outer side, were standing impatiently pawing the ground. The grooms who had them in charge wore red dominoes. When 7:30 arrived and the entrance to the den still remained closed, the crowd began to manifest signs of impatience and become restless. Ten minutes later, however, four dark figures were seen to move along the roof of the den and station themselves over the entrance where the tarpaulins hung. At a signal the fastenings were cut, the canvass fell in a heap and the gorgeous and brilliantly lighted interior broke full upon the view. A deafening shout which was prolonged for some minutes went up from the crowd on all sides, who pushed and jostled each other more than ever to obtain a glimpse of the floats that were being carefully drawn out of the den and placed in their proper places in the line. In former years this has always been attended with considerable difficulty, and invariably an accident of a more or less serious nature has happened to some one of the floats. Last night, however, everything moved in the smoothest possible manner, and not a single piece of tinsel-foil or a leaf on a single tree was turned. As each float made its appearance it was greeted with a loud burst of applause and a general hurrah. Four horses were attached to each of them except the one on which his royal highness himself was enthroned, and this had six. When this last float was placed in line and every man throughout the entire length of the procession was stationed at his post, a bouquet of 100 rockets was shot into the air and filled the heavens with myriads of stars that floated over the vast multitude beneath and gradually faded away in the darkness of the night. This was the signal for the procession to start. The bands along the line struck up, a thousand lights gleamed and cast their refulgent rays upon the gorgeous panorama of floats, and amidst the deafening plaudits of the multitude the great Unknown of the Mississippi Valley began his march through the streets of his beloved city.

THE PROCESSION.

The gorgeous pageant moved out to Lucas Square, headed by the mounted police in command of Chief Harrigan, aided by Capts. Heubler and Frangel. The magnificent array started north on Twelfth street, proceeding to Olive. Between the parted thousands the pageant then wound its way west on Olive to Nineteenth, north on Nineteenth to Washington avenue, east on Washington avenue to Fourth, south on Fourth to Clark avenue, west on Clark avenue to Broadway, north on Broadway to Washington avenue, east on Washington avenue to Third and south on Third to the Chamber of Commerce, where the Prophet's aids dismounted and were escorted into the hall. The representations on the floats were as follows:

FLOAT No. 1—The first float was a portrayal of Shakespeare's dream. On a grassy prominence sat the bard of Avon, lost in fancies, which were embodied in forms around him by the artist. Clio, Thalia, Melpomeme and Erata joined in dance on a greensward behind the poet. About the little mounds and valleys of the float grew in luxurious profusion lilies, palms, poppies, violets, ferns, roses and asphodels which spoke volumes to the mind of genius who sat amid them lost in reverie. In a vapor arch rising from where the thoughtful poet sat rose a cloud in which the creatures of his imagination struggled in their upward flight for superior place and were wafted back over the heads of Poetry, Tragedy and Comedy. The five muses were dressed in rich robes bestudded with jewels which flashed back the lights that fell upon them, dazzling the eyes of the observers. The figure representing the bard of Avon was remarkably correct in costume and countenance, according to the best authorities. The poet was dressed in a rich court costume of royal purple and purple silk velvet. Around the lace ruff at his neck was hung a necklace of precious stones which, too, preached sentiments of the master-mind. The green lights that burned at the side of the floats threw its rays on the grassy plot, giving the whole a very natural hue.

FLOAT No. 2—Was a picture taken from act 1, scene 2, of "A Midsummer Night's Dream." Seated between a dragon's wings, Puck, with his misguiding lantern, directed the monster, which scoured through space guarded by two huge tigers. This yoke of strength and swiftness, guided by the mischievous Robin Goodfellow, drew the chariot of Oberon and Titania, the king and queen of the fairies, surrounded by Puck's fellow elves Peas-Blossom, Cobweb, Mustard Seed and many minor fairies. Enthroned on a gilded prominence sat the king and queen, approvingly looking down upon the bold antics of the venturesome Puck, who flashed his lantern to the right and left without regard for his perilous position. From a high seat just behind the king and queen the triple-faced Hecate surveyed the scene about her. The monster moon in whose pale rays the elves and fairies wandered forth, encompassed the scene from the rear of the float. The huge face of the man in the moon worked grotesquely, rolling the eye and showing his ponderous jaws, with a shrug of satisfaction at the fancy scene.

FLOAT No. 3—Depicted the meeting of Troilus and Cressida, from act 3, scene 2, of the play of that name. In a little ravine between two grassy mounds, and shaded by three huge trees, the lovers met, and folded in each others embrace they passed the thousands of faces that watched their tender emotion that found expression in twining arms and swooning kisses.

FLOAT No. 4—Was a double scene from "As You Like It." In the first Touchstone had just vanquished his rude rival for the hand of Audrey, and driving the carl off with a severe speech, had taken his place beside the innocent lass. Separated from this by a thick growth of vines stood Jacques, the cynic, absorbed in wonder at the beautiful face of the disguised Rosalind.

FLOAT No. 5—Was also a selection from "As You Like It," giving scene 3 from act 4. Orlando had just discovered his brother Oliver asleep in the forest and only a few feet removed from a roaring lion about to spring on the unprotected wanderer, who found fellowship among the reptiles and frogs that surrounded him. Orlando, in his brother's rescue, placed himself in front of the king of the forest and held him off with naked sword.

FLOAT No. 6—Represented a scene from "Much Ado About Nothing." Don Pedro Leonato and Claudius were seen in Leonato's garden conversing about Beatrice's love for Benedick. Behind the pedestal of a statue Benedick was listening eagerly. The characters were magnificently attired. The float itself, with its rich green arbor, around which were twined the most beautiful flowers, and its handsome fountain, from which issued a silvery spray, was a thing of beauty.

FLOAT No. 7—Represented a scene from the "Merchant of Venice." The silvery waters of the canal were spanned by a superb bridge. Numerous gondolas were seen flitting over the waters. In one of these Lorenzo and Jessica were seated, urging the waterman to greater speed in order that they might escape the wrath of Shylock, the fair Jewess' father.

FLOAT No. 8—Represented another scene from the "Merchant of Venice," that of the trial. The Duke and Magnificos were gathered in the palace of justice for the trial of Antonio. In the foreground posed the wily Shylock, with his scales in one hand and his knife in the other. Portia, attired disguised as a doctor of laws, and Narcissa, attired as a lawyer's clerk, were seen in a group conversing about the impending trial.

FLOAT No. 9.—The graveyard scene from Hamlet was the subject of Float No. 9. "Hamlet," with Yorick's skull in his hand, was entertaining Horatio with reminiscences of the jester, while the grave-diggers were busily engaged at their task. The graveyard, with its tottering tombstones, was very realistic. The costuming of the characters represented on this float was magnificent.

FLOAT No. 10—The tenth tableau represented Macbeth in the cavern conversing with the ghastly looking witches, who are executing their weird dancers, and devining whether or not he shall wear in peace the crown he has acquired by blood. At their incantations the caverns yawned and grim spectres peared forth from every nook of the cavern.

FLOAT No. 11—Showed the abdominous knight Sir John Falstaff mustering his forces for the expedition discribed in scene 2, act 3, of "Henry IV." The reluctant soldiers timidly geting into line was a ludicrous representation which found great favor with the throng and was lustily cheered along the route.

FLOAT No. 12—Bosworth Field from "Richard III" grouped the characters of the hand to hand encounter and the attendant soldiers engaged in the deadly fight just outside of Richard's tent from which the misshapen monarch has just emerged. The scene was one of the strongest in the line of floats.

FLOAT No. 13.—Scene 6, act 4, of "King Henry V.," presented the battle scene of Agincourt. The field was strewn with broken armor, over which the horses of the warriors pranced in the fray. With the royal colors streaming, and plumes floating in the air, the knights rushed on to the attack. This float was the best presentation of spirited action in the line.

FLOAT No. 14.—The grateful warriors had just met Coriolanus outside of the walls of Rome, and, welcoming his return, they elevated the hero on a platform and carried him triumphant back to the city. The flashing swords and flying plumes, with the rich costumes, formed the rich scene of oat No. 14

FLOAT No. 15—Anthony and Cleopatra. The magnificent galley of Pompey was gorgeously decorated for the celebration of the peace compact concluded with the triumvirs. The sides and canopy were richly ornamented with leaves of gold that flashed in the glare of the lights. The principals to the contract paced the deck above the rowers, drinking from richly wrought goblets in confirmation of the contract.

FLOAT No. 16—Represented scene 4, act 1, of "Henry VI," where the Duchess of Gloster had called about her the priests, conjuror and witch to devine, if possible, the fate of King Henry and the nobles of the realm who stood between her and her ambition. The group was discovered at the incantation, all dressed in garments wrought with cabalistic figures and producing an unnatural, wierd effect.

FLOAT No. 17.—The seventeenth float represented Leontes kneeling before what he supposes to be the statue of Hermione, his much wronged wife. But a pleasant surprise is in waiting for him when Hermione, convinced of his repentance, steps from the pedestal and embraces him.

FLOAT No. 18—The scene of Float No. 18 was taken from the play of "Julius Cæsar." The portents of Calpurnia's dream were graphically displayed. The night before the assassination of Cæsar, Calpurnia had a dream in which she saw seven warriors clad in glittering armor contending in the clouds, from which blood drizzled upon the forum and ran in the streets, while volcanic eruptions caused the Forum itself to be shaken to its foundation. All the portents of her prophetic dream were delineated in detail upon this handsome float.

FLOAT No. 19—The nineteenth float had for its subject "The Taming of the Shrew." The scene selected was that in which Petruchio carries off by violence the fiery Katharine. Grumio was seen assisting his master and new mistress to mount, while the attendants at the marriage feast were seen bidding them adieu and God-speed from the steps of Baptista's beautiful Paduan villa.

FLOAT No 20—The ludicrous duel scene from the "Merry Wives of Windsor," was the tableau displayed on float No. 20. Dr. Cains and Sir Hugh Evans meet under the shade trees of the forest to fight a duel, but are easily prevailed upon to forego their bloody intentions.

FLOAT No. 21.—Malvolio's folly furnished the subject for this picture. Extravagantly attired the duped steward has just presented his unintelligible addresses to Olivia, and in this ludicrous position is discovered.

FLOAT No. 22.—The Patriarch Prophet, seated on his thrown, looked with satisfaction on the subjects of his domain, and smiled upon the "youths with brand uplifted there, that at the chief's command would make their own devoted hearts it sheath, and blessed the lips that doomed so dear a death."

HOW THE PROPHETS WERE RECEIVED.

As soon as the people began returning from the Fair the streets became almost impassable, and remained so until after the procession. Fourth and Fifth streets and Washington avenue seemed to be the favorite points for the sight-seers along the route of the pageant, although the other streets were well crowded. Many strangers who came to stay only long enough to see the illumination and view the Veiled Prophets' parade were on the street as early as 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and patiently passed the time promenading from one point of interest to another, finally securing a good place for observation, and remained there until feasted with the attractive sights. One thing that seemed to possess unusual interest for the sight-seer was the lighting of the arches and other portions of the illumination. This work was commenced soon after 5 o'clock, and before 7 o'clock the grand illumination was complete, proving as attractive to the multitude on the streets. By 8 o'clock thousands of citizens and their families began arriving down town and mingled with the early crowds. There was a constant moving on the part of all who desired to view the illumination before the pageant made its appearance. Everybody appeared to be good-natured, and a more orderly multitude of people never before crowded the streets of St. Louis. At some points along the route of the procession, particularly where the juvenile element was out in force, the crowd was somewhat noisy, but, nevertheless, extremely well behaved. Any demonstration was generally the result of admiring or ironical comment on the part of some one in the crowd. A slight disturbance was created at the corner of Fourth street and Washington avenue by some rough characters. While the procession was passing the crowd persisted in getting close to the floats. The police labored hard and good naturedly with the crowd, and by a generous clubbing of the more unruly individuals, succeeded in keeping a clear passage and good order. Of course, casualties of a slight character were of frequent occurrence, but, taken all in all, the procession was devoid of any special incident. The bad boy was pretty numerous and continually bent on mischief, proving a terror to the timid and an annoyance to everybody. The crowds, as a rule, were very patient, but the frequent and long breaks in the procession gave rise to a good deal of sarcastic comment. Along Washington avenue, where the crowd was dense, the procession moved on with some difficulty, several stops occurring. The spectators were impartial in their applause, and each float was greeted with vociferous cheers. The witch scene from "Macbeth" was particularly admired, and if there was any special discrimination on the part of the spectators, it was for this float, the scene from "Hamlet," Pompey's Galley, "Richard III.," "Troilus and Cressida," "Taming of the Shrew," and "Midsummer Night's Dream," which appeared to be the favorites. The frequent stoppages on Washington avenue caused a long delay in the appearance of the procession on Fourth street, and the patient crowd indulged in all sorts of conjecture. When Chief Harrigan and his detachment of mounted policemen, heading the procession, turned the corner of Washington avenue, there was a general cry of "It's coming!" and interest and expectation increased as the first float came in view. There was a spontaneous applause from the crowd all along Fourth street. The passage of the procession was somewhat slow on Fourth street, frequent and inexplicable breaks occurring. Here, as elsewhere, everybody seemed to be delighted, and only the most favorable remarks could be heard. The turn at Elm street was not easily made, the dense crowd parting slowly to afford the necessary passage. Up Broadway to Washington avenue the march of the Prophets was a perfect triumph. Down Washington avenue to Third street and along the latter street to the Chamber of Commerce, the floats moved without break or accident. On Washington avenue the multitude was simply vast and that thoroughfare between Third and Broadway was the favorite point for spectators, as they were enabled to view the procession twice.

DISEMBARKING AT THE HALL.

At about 10:15 the swan turned her graceful neck around Chestnut street, and sighted her longed-for home. Although the siege had been a long one, the actors showed commendable endurance, and showed no signs of weakening, except an occasional bending of the knee. Kate lay passive against Petruchio's breast, and Cressida scarcely could respond to the passionate pressure of Troilus' arm. Puck, however, the little villain, untied his supple legs, and left his precarious seat beneath tha dragon's wings, and disappeared with the alacrity of an acrobat. Rosalind unwound her arms from round Orlando's neck and, glad to hide at last her blushes from the gaping crowd, left their place of conspicuous wooing. Touchstone gave William a parting blow and Audrey a farewell hug and fell over himself in making the descent. The lion ceased his fierce maneuvers and allowed the brothers to go in peace. Ladders were brought into use for the elevated figures down which they ran in bewildering and varied succession. Gratiano managed to get off the Rialto bridge without falling into the water, and though Shylock was on the point of dropping his bloodthirsty scales he succeeded in getting down without running his blade through Antonio, the judge was so interested in watching the progress of the others that he came very near bedraggling his own spotless robe, being compelled to run down with a youthful hop, skip and jump. The skull seemed to grin with ghostly merriment when Hamlet got his legs entangled in his robe, but the Dane reached terra firma as sedate as ever. Coriolanus dropped from his high perch very gracefully. Antony and Cleopatra drained their last glass, the witches made their final mutterings, the war horses ceased their spirited prancing, Falstaff with his round belly waddled away, the Veiled Prophet raised his hands in radiant benediction, the lights flickered a moment and then went out, and the poetic dream lingered only in the imagination of the slowly dispersing crowd.

THE GRAND BALL.

At six o'clock last evening the last stroke of the hammer had ceased to echo in the Chamber of Commerce and the hall was in readiness for the gay throngs attending the Veiled Prophet at his annual ball. When the thousands of gas jets had been lighted and the electric lights had assumed full brightness the scene inthe great hall was brilliantl beautiful. The central fountain was a mass of sparkling, glittering light, every drop that rose and fell in a graceful curve seeming animated by fire from the electric lights within. It was a huge cone of gems and rainbows, beautiful in its ever-changing hues. The golden chariot over the rostrum, drawn by golden-harnessed white horses breathing fire for the use of the prophet when his fete should be over, was a splendid addition to the hall, while the taste of the decoration committee was shown in the lovely effects obtained from the profusion of plants and blooming flowers massed around the fountain and on the platform, and in the rich draperies of national flags and the colors of the Prophet. The result, under the radiance of the gas and electric lights, was magnificent, and the hall was all that could be desired by the throngs of richly clad and beautiful women and gallant men who graced the presence of the Prophet. Beautiful as the ball room, fresh from the hands of the decorators, appeared, it was poor then in comparison with what it became when of the country filled the scene with life and animation. It was only the setting for loveliness of a rarer kind, lovely forms, sparkling eyes, alabaster and jeweled necks, rose-tinted cheeks, rich costumes and myriads of gems. Before 9 o'clock the guests had began to arrive, but the throngs did not come until the Veiled Prophet had passed the building along Fourth street. Then a constant stream poured through the grand entrance, and, passing into the dressing rooms to dispose of wraps and outer garments, came on the floor to spend the time until the opening, listening to the entrancing music of the band, promenading around the hall and engaging in conversation with acquaintances. Previous to the entrance of the Prophet and the retinues, all on the floor had taken the seats prepared around the room. All were in lively expectation, and it was difficult to imagine a more pleasing scene. The gay colors of the decorations on the walls, the glittering fountain in the center, the green of the plants, and the lovely tints of the flowers were garnished by an array of feminine beauty such as is seldom gathered under one roof. Tier after tier of lovely women in magnificent costumes, dotted by the more sombre hue of the gentlemen's attire, rose from the floor and mingled with the decorations on the walls. The rays of light were flashed back from countless jewels, shimmered on satins and silks and more delicately tinted complexions, and made a fairly dazzling prospect. At last the orchestra burst into a grand march and the procession of prophets illustrative of the works of the Bard of Avon entered the hall.

THE VARIOUS PERSONAGES,

gorgeously and quaintly attired, separated into two lines, one led by W. H. Thompson and the other by E. C. Simmons, and went through a series of labarynthine movements which served to bring out in strong contrast the different costumes. Their motions were watched with interest by the ladies and gentlemen anxious to themselves respond with flying feet to the enchanting music. When the grand march was ended each prophet chose a fair lady and the ball was opened with the Prophets' Quadrille. The programme of dances was admirably selected, and was itself a work of art. The design on both sides was a shield of gold crossed by a diagonal box of black, along which ran a lance of silver. This shield rests on a more elaborate one in silver, picked out in gold, surrounded by a golden eagle bearing a lance in its claw. Crimson silk cords, fastened to a belt hook with a bust of Shakspeare on it, were provided to suspend the programmes. The music was excellent, the floor all that could be wished, and the weather, although very warm at first, soon changed for the better. For a few hours the participants of the ball entered into the enjoyment of the dance with a zest and heartiness that made it a pleasure to the people in the gallery to witness. After a few hours of unalloyed delight the vast throng commenced leaving, and in a short time the last merry-maker had departed and the ball-room was deserted. Taken altogether, in numbers, the beauty of costumes and decorations and in everything which makes a ball a success, the event of last night was memorable as surpassing all others.

THE CROWDS.

The public has evidently taken a liking to the Exposition block when it comes to viewing a parade, as last evening the space from Thirteenth to Fourteenth streets was packed almost solid, and it was with some difficulty that the police opened a passageway. The Exposition steps were inlaid with humanity, and not a stone around the building was left unoccupied. The throng was especially dense in that neighborhood, as hundreds who wished to get more than one view of the procession crowded in there to view the beginning, prepared, when it had passed, to rush over to Washington avenue and behold the dazzling wonders again. Even the wide area of Twelfth street was considerably narrowed by the overflow of the curious mass, to whom a policeman became an unworthy object of contempt as soon as the Prophets came into view. On Washington avenue an almost equally dense aggregation was gathered long before the hour set, and when the first float arrived there was a roar and rush of the human tide as it poured itself across from Olive street. So it was along the entire march. When it seemed as if every available point of observation and foot of ground was taken, along would come a small army from the last street passed and swell the crowd by thousands. Thus a large part of the multitude was almost continually in motion. On Broadway and Fourth street the lines of illumination served as an additional attraction, and under the clusters of globes and the flickering brilliance of the trees thousands assembled and stood with the persistency and patience of a moth attracted by a flame. Notwithstanding the long hours some were compelled to hold their post the best of good humor prevailed, and the inhabitants of the mysterious realm were greeted with as much enthusiasm as they neared the end of their route as when they first emerged from the den hours before, and flashed their lights in audacious conflict with the moon and stars.

At the Chamber of Commerce, near which the Prophets disappeared from mortal vision, the same scene was witnessed, and their farewell smiles fell upon a sea of human faces nearly as mighty and resistless as the river flowing but a short distance away. Owing to the changeable attitude of the crowds it was impossible to form a clear idea of the number that beheld the passing of the beautiful dream, but there can be no doubt that more than 300,000 people feasted upon the wondrous sight during the two hours and a half of its passage. This has to do only with those on the street level and does not take into consideration the hundreds that sought the upper windows and the roofs.

THE ILLUMINATIONS.

After the chosen few of the thousands of visitors and citizens entered the Exchange hall the majority remnant promenaded the illuminated streets. The scene was as bright as mid-day. Many ascended in to the vacated seats to watch the passing throng and wait for street car accommodation. Many who despaired of securing conveyance home started on foot. At midnight the lights were extinguished and the last of the loiterers were homeward bound along the darkened thoroughfares.

NOTES AND INCIDENTS.

About 10:30 o'clock last night the Anthony and Cleopatra float collided with the arch at the corner of Broadway and Washington avenue, knocking it down. The streets were crowded at the time and several persons were injured by the crashing glass and iron. A young lady who refused to give her name had one hand badly lacerated by a broken globe. Emil Spieldech of 902 Carr street had his left ankle sprained. Mrs. C. C. Lewis of Winchester, Ill., was caught between the falling arch and a fire plug, and seriously crushed. She was taken to the Atlantic Hotel in an unconscious condition.

John Dohn and Charles Beck were arrested at Fourteenth and Pine streets for recklessly driving into a barouche containing a lady and two children.

A buggy driven by Mr. Albert Spink and a barouche containing Mr. Raymond and lady collided at Twelfth and Pine street about 7 o'clock last evening. Mr. Raymond and lady were thrown to the ground. The lady was severely bruised.

A colored man, 65 years old, was knocked down and run over at 14th and Morgan streets by an unknown man last night. The driver escaped and the colored man was taken home by a friend without making complaint.

A crowd of boys on the roof of Hotel Barnum, Sixth and Washington avenue, amused themselves last night throwing gravel on the crowd below. This bombardment made it necessary for ladies without protecting rims to their hats to leave the place.

While Mrs. Maggie Hartman, of 1857 Lynn street, was down down witnessing the parade a coal oil lamp exploded at her house. An alarm was turned on. The damage was only slight.

TILDEN ON THE SITTATION.

His Reply to the Address from the National Democratic Convention.

NEW YORK, October 8.—Following is Mr. Tilden's response to the committee of the National Democratic Convention, conveying to him the resolutions of that body:

GREYSTONE, October 4, 1884.—Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Committee: I thank you for the kind terms in which you have communicated the resolutions concerning me adopted by the late National Democratic Convention. I share your conviction that reform in the administration of the Federal Government, which is our great national want and is, indeed, essential to the restoration and preservation of the Government itself, can only be achieved through the agency of the Democratic party, and by installing its representative in the Chief Magistracy of the United States. The noble historical traditions of the Democratic party, the principles in which it was educated and to which it has ever been in the main faithful, its freedom from corrupt influences which grow up in the prolonged possession of power and the nature of the elements which constitute it, all contribute to qualify it for that mission. The opposite characteristics and conditions which attach to the Republican party make it hopeless to expect that that party will be able to give a better government than the debasing system of abuses which, during its ascendency, has infected official and political life in this country.

The Democratic party had its origin in the efforts of the more advanced patriots of the revolution to resist the perversion of our Government from the ideal contemplated by the people. Among its conspicious founders are Benjamin Franklin and Thomas Jefferson, Samuel Adams and John Hancock of Massachusetts, General Clinton and Robert R. Livingston of New York, and George Wythe and James Madison of Virginia. From the election of Mr. Jefferson as President in 1800, for sixty years the Democratic party directed our national policy. It extended the boundaries of the republic, and laid the foundation of our national greatness, while it preserved the limitations imposed by the constitution and maintained a simple and pure system of domestic administration. On the other hand, the Republican party has always been dominated by principles which favor legislation for the benefit of particular classes at the expense of the body of the people. It has become deeply tainted with the abuses which naturally grow up during the long possession of unchecked power, especially in a period of civil war and false finance. The patriotic and virtuous elements in it are now unable to emancipate it from the sway of selfish interests which subordinate public duty to personal greed. The most hopeful of the best citizens it contains despair of its amendment except through its temporary expulsion from power. It has been boastingly asserted by a modern Massachusetts statesman, struggling to reconcile himself and his followers to its Presidential candidate, that the Republican party contains a disproportionate share of the wealth, the culture and the intelligence of the country. The unprincipled Grafton, when taunted by James II. with his personal want of conscience, answered: "That is true, but I belong to a party that has a great deal of conscience." Such reasoners forget that the same claim has been made in all ages and countries by the defenders of old wrongs against new reforms. It was alleged by the Tories of the American Revolution against the patriots of that day. It was repeated against Jefferson and afterwards against Jackson. It is alleged by the Conservatives against those who in England are now endeavoring to enlarge the popular suffrage. All history shows that reforms in Government must not be from those who sit serenely on the social mountain tops eyeing the benefits of the existing order of things. Even the Divine author of our religion found his followers not among complacent Pharisees, but among lowly-minded fishermen. The Republican party is largely made up of those who live by their wits and who aspire to advantages over the rest of mankind similar to those which their daily lives are devoted to securing in private business. The Democratic party consists largely of those who live by the work of their hands and whose political action is governed by their sentiments of imagination. It results that the Democratic more readily than the Republican party can be molded to the support of reform measures which involve a sacrifice of selfish interests. The indispensable necessity of our times is a change of administration in the great executive offices of the country. This, in my judgment, can only be accomplished by the election of the Democratic candidates for President and Vice-President.

WEBER'S REVENGE.

He Laughs at the Gentlemen Who Reviled the Cold Wave Signal.

There was probably no more remarkable individual in the sweating crowd last night than Corporal Weber of the Signal Office, who was pointed out as the "man that hung up a cold wave flag and then went around wiping the perspiration off his face." This morning the Observer got his revenge and nobody has less sympathy to-day with the victim of a cold in the head and a snuffling nose than he. Last night the heat was astonishing, the thermometer up in the signal dome marking 83° at 10 o'clock and 76° at 2 a. m. About 3 a. m. the wind shifted to the north and the mercury steadily fell, at 6 marking 56° and at 9 o'clock 54°. With a clear sky the change would not be noticed much, but the heavy clouds, occasionally dripping rain, and the raw north wind give a very sere-and-yellow-leaf appearance to things mundane.

HOW TO HIBERNATE.

Problems of Domestic Economy Receiving Practical Treatment at Washington.

Relative Merits of Hotel, "Flat" and Boarding House Existence—The Favored Few who Dwell in the Shade of Their Own Vine and Fig Tree—Arrivals and Departures at the Capital—Society Notes.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, October 8.—Society is a good deal interested this week in the arrival of numerous and sundry Congressmen to make preparation for the coming session, in the way of the selection of residences, hotel accommodations, or "rooms." There is a great scramble about this time of the season in preparation for winter abiding places. Congressman Hitt of Illinois, who has had long experience here, both in Congress and as Assistant Secretary of State, knows the importance of being early on the ground, and is accordingly here, as is also his charming wife. They have taken a handsome residence, formerly occupied by Senator Hill's family, at the corner of Fifteenth and K streets, and are already preparing to take possession. Mr. Hitt evidently considers a nomination equivalent to an election, for he has taken the house for a term of three years. Senator Beck and wife are expected in a short time, and will, on their arrival, go, as is their custom, to the home of Major and Mrs. Goodloe, the daughter and son-in-law of the Senator, where they will remain until they have time to select a winter residence. Senator McPherson's new house here has been the occasion of a visit from Mrs. McPherson this week. She hopes to see it ready for occupancy at a pretty early date. Mrs. Voorhes and Mrs. Jonas, who have been at the Portland most of the summer, are still here, though Mrs. Voorhes expects soon to take possession of a private residence which she has been examining, preferring this to hotel or "flat" life, when her daughter, who is to spend the winter in society here, shall arrive. She goes in a few days to Indiana for a visit before the session begins. The family of Representative Hopkins of Pennsylvania have returned to their last winter's residence in this city, and Mr. Hopkins, who had decided not to be a candidate for Congress again, having changed his mind, has come home to whoop up things in his district. Delegate Post of Wyoming has been here arranging for the winter. Mrs. Post was very popular in society here, probably more prominent in a social way than the wife of any other of the Territorial delegates. Phil Thompson of Kentucky, who was defeated for a renomination by ex-Governor McCreary of that State, has been for some time past, and expects to occupy the same quarters he has had for some years past. Representative Hatch, the chairman of the House Agricultural Committee, has been here within the past few days and made his winter arrangements. Mrs. Senator Vance of North Carolina has been here and prepared her winter programme of home life, and is now in North Carolina again. Senator Manderson of Nebraska has arranged to spend the winter at the Portland, one of the most popular hotel and "flat" establishments in the city.

"FLATS"

are quite the popular thing with Congressmen. They are comfortable, usually well furnished and attractive, easy of access, and more than all, fashionable. Such prominent Senators as Mr. Voorhes, Mr. Butler, of South Carolina; Mr. Manderson of Nebraska; Mr. Jones of Louisiana: the First Assistant Postmaster General, Congressman Hunt of Louisiana and many others that might be mentioned, occupy "flats" in some of the numerous establishments of the city devoted to this purpose. Some others of prominence board at the hotels, preferring this method of life to the annoyance of housekeeping or of flats. Still others rent furnished houses, and a few have houses of their own, while the large majority "board."

The return of people from the sea and mountains has been somewhat checked during the past ten days by the very hot wave which has visited the city. The heat during the few days past has been really a oppressive as at any time during the entire summer. Notwithstanding this, however, the arrivals have been numerous. Marshal McMichael is back and is expecting his family as soon as he can find a suitable home for them. Chief Clerk Brown of the State Department has returned to his home on Iowa Circle, accompanied by Mrs. Brown and her mother, the wife of Minister Phelps, now at his post in Chili. Surgeon General Murray is back, and has with his family taken a handsome house on Capitol Hill. Mrs. Scott, wife of the late Admiral Scott, has leased her residence on Twentieth street and taken one at the corner of Thirteenth and N for the winter. Mr. Anthony Pollok, who has been absent in Europe, accompanied by his family, has just returned. They spent a considerable portion of their time in Normandy where Mrs. Pollok had spent many years. The daughter of Commodore DeKrafft has returned from Saratoga and is at the home of the Commodore in this city. Rear Admiral Simson of the Navy has taken a residence on M street for the winter. Ex-Senator Yulee of Florida has returned to the city and is to spend the winter here, as is his custom. Madame de Struve, the wife of the Russian Minister, has returned, and is preparing for a winter of social pleasures. The entertainments at the residence of the Russian Minister last year were the most agreeable of the many which Washington society enjoyed, and the return of their author and finisher is hailed with pleasure by those who were favored with the privilege of enjoying them last season.

NOTES.

It is announced that Count Lewenhaupt, the Swedish Minister, is preparing to return permanently to Europe. This announcement will be received with great regret by the social world here, for the Count and Countess were especially popular.

There were, it is asserted, six hundred guests at the marriage of Miss Julia Ridgely of Baltimore to J. Southgate Yeaton of Alexandria, which occurred recently at Towson, Md. The presents are said to have been $50,000 in value.

The Turkish Minister, Rustem Effendi, is representing Turkey at the International Congress now at the State Department. He spends little of his time in Washington, preferring New York City, where he is usually to be found.

Madame Yturbide, who has been in Mexico, her former home, for some weeks past, is expected to return in November. Her son, Mr. Augustine Yturbide, who is a student at Georgetown College, has returned from their country seat near the city, "Rosedale," and resumed his duties at the college.

Mrs. Harriet Kilbourne and Miss Kilbourne, the wife and daughter of Hallett Kilbourne, of house imprisonment fame, are in Paris, where they will probably spend the winter. They have been most of the time abroad for several years past.

Business Men Anxiously Awaiting the Event of the Election.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, October 8.—The business people of the Eastern cities are looking with a good deal of interest for the end of the political campaign. That the political anxiety which pervades the entire country seriously upsets their business, goes with[illegible]ying. Everybody is looking to politics, and [illegible]ybody is willing to put off business until the [illegible]paign is over and the resu[illegible]own. This is p[illegible]rly the case in the South. There is an indescribable and uncertain feeling there that Democratic success would improve the general condition, in spite of the protests of certain manufacturing interests, and the result is a tendency to wait in business matters until the result of the election is known. Some rather unsatisfactory reports come from the South regarding the condition of business affairs there. As to its effect upon business, most of them prefer Republican success, because it means a continuation in the present "rut," without any probability of change in policy to disturb the channel of business. The fall trade, they say, is quite as good as it could be expected under the present state of affairs, and though prices are 10 or 15 per cent lower than a year ago, the general trade will, they think, be as good as in any year for some time past. Some of them take a more hopeful and philosophical view of the situation, and express the belief that business is going to be this year really better than for a long time; that the disasters of last summer, by which fictitious values were swept away and habits of extravagance checked, will result in a great improvement of the general condition of the business of the country.

A SERIOUS CHARGE.

Rev. W. T. Osman on Trial in Connecticut for Criminally Assaulting a Little Girl.

Story of the Mother's Grief and the Father's Furious Anger.—The Preacher Jailed in Bridgeport for Want of Bail.—A Defense of General Good Character and Christian Zeal.—Incidents of the Trial.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, October 8.—The Rev. W. T. Osman's appearance when, with Deputy Sheriff Bolster at his heels, he shambled into the Stamford, Conn., court yesterday morning, was one of general collapse. A grey, stubby beard adorned his chin, his face was sallow and haggard, and his long-skirted black coat was rumpled. He sat and built card houses of the blotting pads on the table. The court room was packed so full that by no possibility could another have got in. The railing separating the space in front of the bench from the audience repeatedly cracked and threatened to give way. Judge Keeler was several times obliged to stop proceedings to hush the noise of talk and shuffling feet.

"Your Honor, Mr. Coffee won't keep quiet," said a deputy in a despairing tone of voice.

"Put Mr. Coffee out," said the Court.

Mr. Coffee was disentangled and eliminated. In the meantime a little mite of a girl was answering, in a low voice and with tears, the questions of the prosecutor, as he bent over her and tried to quiet her. She told a straightforward story, accusing Mr. Osman of assaulting her. Mrs. Jimmerson, the mother of the child was neqt called-

"I said to my husband," she said, "when I found out the truth, 'go and kill that monster,'" (pointing to Osman) "'or I will do it!'" Atanother part of her testimony, she sprang to her feet and, again pointing her finger at Osman, she cried out, "That brute there came to me and said, can't we settle this thing?" He came to me again and said the same thing. I told him to get out of my sight or I would splinter a chair over his head." During this outbreak Osman sat quietly fingering the blotting bads seeming

QUITE UNMOVED.

Mrs. Jimmerson said that the child went to Osman s room in the morning to get her doll. As she opened the door to go in, Mrs. Jimmerson heard Osman conning over the sermon he was to preach that morning in church. The little girl was gone some fifteen minutes, and came back so flushed that her mother questioned her.

Mr. Jimmerson, a clerical looking man, with neatly trimmed side whiskers, said that he confronted Osman, and gave him two hours to get out of the house. Osman did not ask what he was accused of. Jimmerson went away with the girl to the doctor's. When he came back Osman was gone. Subsequently Jimmerson, in company with Mr. Haight, searched for Osman. They found him alone in the woods about half a mile from the road. He was carrying a student's lamp and some sermons and books tied up in a shawl. He was soon after arrested and brought to Stamford.

The defense called Osman himself. His testimony was a general and strong denial of the charge. He related the interview with Jimmerson and said that the man was furiously angry, using profane language, and that Mr. Jimmerson "flew at me like a wild-cat." On cross-examination he said that he did not ask what the charge was, and did not ask to be confronted with the little girl. It occurred to him what it might be, while he was seated on a rock out in the woods. His only thought at first was to get away from Jimmerson, from whom he feared mortal injury, as he knew Jimmerson to be a man of violent temper. He was about to go to Deacon Davenport, when Jimmerson and Haight came upon him in the woods.

HELD OVER.

Judge Keeler decided to hold Osman over for trial at the next session of the Superior Court, which sits in Bridgeport a week from next Tuesday. The bail was fixed at $1,500. Osman was taken to the Bridgeport Jail.

When Osman was 12 years old, as he testified on cross-examination, he went to sea and he was a sailor until he was 20; then he went into the patent right and patent medicine business; then he went West and bought and sold stock; then he went to Providence and opened a wholesale and retail liquor business. He attended the meetings of the Young Men's Christian Association and was converted. He sold out his liquor store and went to preaching and had been preaching ever since. He was ordained in 1871. A gentleman in the court-room said he knew of Osman's conversion, and that the liquor business he gave up was very profitable; that the night before he abandoned it he took in $1,400. The Rev. Mr. Scoville, pastor of the Congregational Church in Stamford, said he knew Osman; that he was regarded as active and zealous, and that he had done much good. It was through Mr. Scoville's influence that Osman got the South Stamford parish.

Problems of Domestic Economy Receiving Practical Treatment at Washington.

Relative Merits of Hotel, "Flat" and Boarding House Existence—The Favored Few who Dwell in the Shade of Their Own Vine and Fig Tree—Arrivals and Departures at the Capital—Society Notes.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, October 8.—Society is a good deal interested this week in the arrival of numerous and sundry Congressmen to make preparation for the coming session, in the way of the selection of residences, hotel accommodations, or "rooms." There is a great scramble about this time of the season in preparation for winter abiding places. Congressman Hitt of Illinois, who has had long experience here, both in Congress and as Assistant Secretary of State, knows the importance of being early on the ground, and is accordingly here, as is also his charming wife. They have taken a handsome residence, formerly occupied by Senator Hill's family, at the corner of Fifteenth and K streets, and are already preparing to take possession. Mr. Hitt evidently considers a nomination equivalent to an election, for he has taken the house for a term of three years. Senator Beck and wife are expected in a short time, and will, on their arrival, go, as is their custom, to the home of Major and Mrs. Goodloe, the daughter and son-in-law of the Senator, where they will remain until they have time to select a winter residence. Senator McPherson's new house here has been the occasion of a visit from Mrs. McPherson this week. She hopes to see it ready for occupancy at a pretty early date. Mrs. Voorhes and Mrs. Jonas, who have been at the Portland most of the summer, are still here, though Mrs. Voorhes expects soon to take possession of a private residence which she has been examining, preferring this to hotel or "flat" life, when her daughter, who is to spend the winter in society here, shall arrive. She goes in a few days to Indiana for a visit before the session begins. The family of Representative Hopkins of Pennsylvania have returned to their last winter's residence in this city, and Mr. Hopkins, who had decided not to be a candidate for Congress again, having changed his mind, has come home to whoop up things in his district. Delegate Post of Wyoming has been here arranging for the winter. Mrs. Post was very popular in society here, probably more prominent in a social way than the wife of any other of the Territorial delegates. Phil Thompson of Kentucky, who was defeated for a renomination by ex-Governor McCreary of that State, has been for some time past, and expects to occupy the same quarters he has had for some years past. Representative Hatch, the chairman of the House Agricultural Committee, has been here within the past few days and made his winter arrangements. Mrs. Senator Vance of North Carolina has been here and prepared her winter programme of home life, and is now in North Carolina again. Senator Manderson of Nebraska has arranged to spend the winter at the Portland, one of the most popular hotel and "flat" establishments in the city.

"FLATS"

are quite the popular thing with Congressmen. They are comfortable, usually well furnished and attractive, easy of access, and more than all, fashionable. Such prominent Senators as Mr. Voorhes, Mr. Butler, of South Carolina; Mr. Manderson of Nebraska; Mr. Jones of Louisiana: the First Assistant Postmaster General, Congressman Hunt of Louisiana and many others that might be mentioned, occupy "flats" in some of the numerous establishments of the city devoted to this purpose. Some others of prominence board at the hotels, preferring this method of life to the annoyance of housekeeping or of flats. Still others rent furnished houses, and a few have houses of their own, while the large majority "board."

The return of people from the sea and mountains has been somewhat checked during the past ten days by the very hot wave which has visited the city. The heat during the few days past has been really as oppressive as at any time during the entire summer. Notwithstanding this, however, the arrivals have been numerous. Marshal McMichael is back and is expecting his family as soon as he can find a suitable home for them. Chief Clerk Brown of the State Department has returned to his home on Iowa Circle, accompanied by Mrs. Brown and her mother, the wife of Minister Phelps, now at his post in Chili. Surgeon General Murray is back, and has with his family taken a handsome house on Capitol Hill. Mrs. Scott, wife of the late Admiral Scott, has leased her residence on Twentieth street and taken one at the corner of Thirteenth and N for the winter. Mr. Anthony Pollok, who has been absent in Europe, accompanied by his family, has just returned. They spent a considerable portion of their time in Normandy where Mrs. Pollok had spent many years. The daughter of Commodore DeKrafft has returned from Saratoga and is at the home of the Commodore in this city. Rear Admiral Simson of the Navy has taken a residence on M street for the winter. Ex-Senator Yulee of Florida has returned to the city and is to spend the winter here, as is his custom. Madame de Struve, the wife of the Russian Minister, has returned, and is preparing for a winter of social pleasures. The entertainments at the residence of the Russian Minister last year were the most agreeable of the many which Washington society enjoyed, and the return of their author and finisher is hailed with pleasure by those who were favored with the privilege of enjoying them last season.

NOTES.

It is announced that Count Lewenhaupt, the Swedish Minister, is preparing to return permanently to Europe. This announcement will be received with great regret by the social world here, for the Count and Countess were especially popular.

There were, it is asserted, six hundred guests at the marriage of Miss Julia Ridgely of Baltimore to J. Southgate Yeaton of Alexandria, which occurred recently at Towson, Md. The presents are said to have been $50,000 in value.

The Turkish Minister, Rustem Effendi, is representing Turkey at the International Congress now at the State Department. He spends little of his time in Washington, preferring New York City, where he is usually to be found.

Madame Yturbide, who has been in Mexico, her former home, for some weeks past, is expected to return in November. Her son, Mr. Augustine Yturbide, who is a student at Georgetown College, has returned from their country seat near the city, "Rosedale," and resumed his duties at the college.

Mrs. Harriet Kilbourne and Miss Kilbourne, the wife and daughter of Hallett Kilbourne, of house imprisonment fame, are in Paris, where they will probably spend the winter. They have been most of the time abroad for several years past.

WITH BATED BREATH.

Business Men Anxiously Awaiting the Event of the Election.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, October 8.—The business people of the Eastern cities are looking with a good deal of interest for the end of the political campaign. That the political anxiety which pervades the entire country seriously upsets their business, goes without saying. Everybody is looking to politics, and everybody is willing to put off business until the campaign is over and the result is known. This is particularly the case in the South. There is an indescribable and uncertain feeling there that Democratic success would improve the general condition, in spite of the protests of certain manufacturing interests, and the result is a tendency to wait in business matters until the result of the election is known. Some rather unsatisfactory reports come from the South regarding the condition of business affairs there. The merchants of the Eastern cities say there is great difficulty in making collections there. And their statements are re-echoed by the merchants of those sections, who plead this state of facts as a reason for their tardiness in paying. They say money is almost impossible to get. The cause of it is pretty hard to get at. They say that the Northern money-lenders, on whom they have to depend to a great extent, seem to be shy of the South again. The banks that a year ago were willing to loan money on good paper now refuse even that which is unquestionably "gilt-edged." They hope for better things soon, when the crops of the South, which are exceptionally good this year, get into the market. Yet it must be some months before the result of this can be felt to any considerable degree. The closing of some of the manufacturing institutions of the Southern States, particularly cotton mills, has made the Northern money-lenders shy, and the distress in banking circles has caused many who loaned to the banks there to shut down peremptorily.

Generally speaking, however, the wholesalers and financiers of the East look for a pretty prosperous season after the election, a month hence, has passed out of the way. As to its effect upon business, most of them prefer Republican success, because it means a continuation in the present "rut," without any probability of change in policy to disturb the channel of business. The fall trade, they say, is quite as good as it could be expected under the present state of affairs, and though prices are 10 or 15 per cent lower than a year ago, the general trade will, they think, be as good as in any year for some time past. Some of them take a more hopeful and philosophical view of the situation, and express the belief that business is going to be this year really better than for a long time; that the disasters of last summer, by which fictitious values were swept away and habits of extravagance checked, will result in a great improvement of the general condition of the business of the country.

A SERIOUS CHARGE.

Rev. W. T. Osman on Trial in Connecticut for Criminally Assaulting a Little Girl.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, October 8.—The Rev. W. T. Osman's appearance when, with Deputy Sheriff Bolster at his heels, he shambled into the Stamford, Conn., court yesterday morning, was one of general collapse. A grey, stubby beard adorned his chin, his face was sallow and haggard, and his long-skirted black coat was rumpled. He sat and built card houses of the blotting pads on the table. The court room was packed so full that by no possibility could another have got in. The railing separating the space in front of the bench from the audience repeatedly cracked and threatened to give way. Judge Keeler was several times obliged to stop proceedings to hush the noise of talk and shuffling feet.

"Your Honor, Mr. Coffee won't keep quiet," said a deputy in a despairing tone of voice.

"Put Mr. Coffee out," said the Court.

Mr. Coffee was disentangled and eliminated. In the meantime a little mite of a girl was answering, in a low voice and with tears, the questions of the prosecutor, as he bent over her and tried to quiet her. She told a straightforward story, accusing Mr. Osman of assaulting her. Mrs. Jimmerson, the mother of the child was next called.

"I said to my husband," she said, "when I found out the truth, 'go and kill that monster,' " (pointing to Osman) " 'or I will do it!' " At another part of her testimony, she sprang to her feet and, again pointing her finger at Osman, she cried out, "That brute there came to me and said, can't we settle this thing?" He came to me again and said the same thing. I told him to get out of my sight or I would splinter a chair over his head." During this outbreak Osman sat quietly fingering the blotting pads seeming

QUITE UNMOVED.

Mrs. Jimmerson said that the child went to Osman's room in the morning to get her doll. As she opened the door to go in, Mrs. Jimmerson heard Osman conning over the sermon he was to preach that morning in church. The little girl was gone some fifteen minutes, and came back so flushed that her mother questioned her.

Mr. Jimmerson, a clerical looking man, with neatly trimmed side whiskers, said that he confronted Osman, and gave him two hours to get out of the house. Osman did not ask what he was accused of. Jimmerson went away with the girl to the doctor's. When he came back Osman was gone. Subsequently Jimmerson, in company with Mr. Haight, searched for Osman. They found him alone in the woods about half a mile from the road. He was carrying a student's lamp and some sermons and books tied up in a shawl. He was soon after arrested and brought to Stamford.

The defense called Osman himself. His testimony was a general and strong denial of the charge. He related the interview with Jimmerson and said that the man was furiously angry, using profane language, and that Mr. Jimmerson "flew at me like a wild-cat." On cross-examination he said that he did not ask what the charge was, and did not ask to be confronted with the little girl. It occurred to him what it might be, while he was seated on a rock out in the woods. His only thought at first was to get away from Jimmerson, from whom he feared mortal injury, as he knew Jimmerson to be a man of violent temper. He was about to go to Deacon Davenport, when Jimmerson and Haight came upon him in the woods.

HELD OVER.

Judge Keeler decided to hold Osman over for trial at the next session of the Superior Court, which sits in Bridgeport a week from next Tuesday. The bail was fixed at $1,500. Osman was taken to the Bridgeport Jail.

When Osman was 12 years old, as he testified on cross-examination, he went to sea and he was a sailor until he was 20; then he went into the patent right and patent medicine business; then he went West and bought and sold stock; then he went to Providence and opened a wholesale and retail liquor business. He attended the meetings of the Young Men's Christian Association and was converted. He sold out his liquor store and went to preaching and had been preaching ever since. He was ordained in 1871. A gentleman in the court-room said he knew of Osman's conversion, and that the liquor business he gave up was very profitable; that the night before he abandoned it he took in $1,400. The Rev. Mr. Scoville, pastor of the Congregational Church in Stamford, said he knew Osman; that he was regarded as active and zealous, and that he had done much good. It was through Mr. Scoville's influence that Osman got the South Stamford parish.

He Got the Place.

From the Chicago Herald.

A pale-faced young man stood on the side side porch of a Michigan avenue palace pulling his mustache nervously. He had rung the bell and he was awaiting a response. Presently the door opened and a corn-fed citizen of Chicago appeared, looking round about him sharply.

"I came to apply for a position as coachman," said the caller.

"Well, I want a coachman, and if your references are satisfactory I'll pay you $30 a month and board."

"That's satisfactory, providing your references are all right," observed the applicant.

"What do you mean by that?" roared the millionaire.

"Nothing, only just self-protection, boss. You see, I've been run off with two or three times in my life, and I've had enough. What I want now is to get a place where there ain't no daughters—just a nice old couple and a maiden aunt or an old uncle, or something of that kind. That's what I mean."

He was informed that the only daughter had skipped out the week before, and that that was the reason they wanted a coachman. She took the other one with her. The newcomer then enlisted.

A Fifty Mile Race Track.

From the Detroit Free Press.

"Yas," said an old settler, "we ran hosses in Texas."

"Then you take an interest in the noble sports?" asked the stranger.

"I was engaged in a hoss race some years ago in which I took a right smart interest."

"Running race?"

"Hit war."

"Mile or half track?"

"Hit war a fifty mile track, stranger. Texas is a big State."

"A fifty mile track! I never heard of such a thing. And did you win?"

"You bet."

"How much did you win?"

"I won the hoss, stranger."

A FRIEND OF LABOR.

O. M. Bonny Defends the Greenback-Labor Nomination.

And Proves Conclusively That John M. Glover is the Right Man for the Party to Support for Congress—An Interesting Document.

The differences between the Ninth District Greenback-Labor Convention, which indorsed the nomination of Mr. John M. Glover for Congress, and the State Committee of that party has called out the following statement from Mr. O. M. Bonny, which will be found interesting reading by the voters of all parties. It recites the true history of the case, and will doubtless have much effect on the labor vote:

To the Members of State Central Committee of the Greenback Labor Party of Missouri.

GENTLEMEN—I am in receipt through the public press of the alleged resolution of your committee, purporting to deprive me of my standing in your committee and substitute another in my place, and setting forth the state of facts upon the assumption of which this action was taken.

A decent regard for the opinions of my fellow-citizens and for the integrity of the party machinery compels me to reply that the so-called recitals of facts are false, and that the committee far exceeded its jurisdiction in attempting to take the action proposed.

Our party is now on its probation before the people of Missouri and also before the country at large. Men of wealth without the capital of brain or principle have at times secured its indorsement in a way to throw suspicions upon it and at other times have sought with more or less openness to make a matter of purchase and sale of its support.

All this has turned to the detriment of the party and tended to discredit it at home and abroad. I put it to the members of the State Central Committee that the Republican nominee in the Ninth Congressional District, over whose nomination by his own party a great scandal has arisen, is the man whose active friends are my secret accusers, and whose enthusiasm alike for his support and my destruction was accompanied by a bribe in one hand and a threat in the other, and in view of recent developments was probably too sudden and violent to be created by mere regard for public duty. The main agitator, once when less well known, crowned himself with the honors of a nomination at our hands, and is reputed to have sold the Shrievalty and the party for thirty pieces of silver. The other members of the clique are aliens to the Ninth District, who, since the inception of our movement, have set our party up for sale in public places, and arrogated, no matter where or when a nomination was to be made, a division of the spoils acquired by playing huckster of her charms.

To deal first with the result of the work with which you charge me, the result of my action has been to place in the field against this millionaire of commercial methods in politics, a young man of unblemished character and undisputed ability, and of unquestioned sympathy with our ends, who doubtless could not afford to spend in his whole canvass as much as McLean could readily offer for one nomination.

To consider next the methods of that nomination, the main offense with which I am charged is that I called the convention before Mr. McLean was in the field. If it be true that a man will offer more money for the purposes of corruption before he is sure of success in his own party than after, my action has only served to disappoint the hucksters, and should cause no honest Greenbacker any tears. The place selected for the convention was that of the Hall of Butler and West Club; the time was one of the regular meetings, when its membership of 125 to 150 members were expected and invited to be present, and a seating capacity of 250 gave small chance of controlling the will of the majority by outside influences. The auctioneers of party virtue, it is true, were given little time to set up their booths and arouse rivalry between bidders, but every man of our party within the district entitled to notice received it in ample time, if mere attendance and an honest vote were all that he desired. The City Convention of 1880 was called in the same time precisely. Both McLean and Glover were put in nomination without notice either. Glover carried the convention by an overwhelming majority. There were 300 voters present. Although a large number of the Butler and West Club were present McLean received but three votes. I did not incline the balance a hair's breadth either way, and myself put McLean in nomination, that both sides might be before the convention.

The advocates of Mr. Glover set forth in strong language his freedom from entanglements with rings and corporations and his strong and fearless sympathy with the people, and, to prove the latter, read to the convention from a printed speech, copies of which were circulated in the crowd, delivered by him in 1882 to the workingmen the following extracts:

After some introductory remarks, the speaker said that the workingmen had realized that knowledge was power, and that their platforms were demanding education. "Continued," he said, "to seek more light;" that they had also found that unity is strength, and illustrated it by the fable of the farmer who showed his sons that they could break the fagots separately, but not in a bundle. He compared the army of laboring men, "marching with a common tread from sea to sea," to those enormous armies whose command said to one empire, fall; to another, stand.

"Whose rear lay wrapped in night, while breaking dawn Roused the loud front and called the battle on."

He said: "With faces toward the morning set, long have you waited for the dawn. Be wise, be moderate, and the day will shortly break. [Applause.] A national bureau of labor statistics should be established. [Applause.] Sanitary inspections of mines, factories and all conditions of labor should be provided for. [Applause.] The employment of children under 14 years of age in mines or factories should be prohibited and their education arranged for instead. [Applause.] Laws should be enacted giving mechanics and laborers a first lien on their work for their full wages. [Applause.] I am a lawyer, and I know how often a poor man abandons $3 lest he lose $5 in seeking it, and how often that $3 means a day's bread! I congratulate you that the Secretary of the Navy has concluded to enforce the eight hour law. This gives more time to rest the body and feed the mind. Constant work grinds labor to the bone and impoverishes the soul. [Applause.] The man who keeps his country's laws, and, binding his wife and children to his heart, goes forth to earn a pittance for their bread, should be protected from the competition of striped scoundrels in the Penitentiary." [Applause.]

Mr. Glover then pointed out some dangerous tendencies of the times. He denounced laws in various States, restricting the suffrage and basing it on a property qualification. Of this he said: "It shows only the cloven hoof now within the door, but bye and bye, if we look not to it, we shall have the forked tail and the whole devil, and with him seven other devils of despair. [Applause.] Out with him now. The dangers of continued possession are more serious than the agonies of the tremendous exorcism." [Applause.] The speaker then denounced a law of Virginia, under which the other day, he said, a man born free and of Caucasian blood, was sold for $2 and given into the custody of a private owner for a year, for no crime but that of being unable, possibly with his best efforts, to find work. "Pull down these laws," he said, "as the French did the Bastile, with your bare hands." [Applause.] "But," he said, "against the torch and the ax, against violence to persons and property, you should set your faces like the face of rock set against a storm." [Applause.]

A resolution was subjoined to the speech in the following terms:

Resolved, That this meeting tender to Hon. John M. Glover the thanks of the workingmen of St. Louis for the eloquent and able address of this evening, and the sincere interest and sympathy which he displays for our welfare.

These influences had naturally a strong effect upon the meeting, and after a full and free discussion of the situation, including its relation to the fusion idea in Missouri, and lasting over one hour, the convention passed unanimously the following resolutions:

Whereas, The Democratic party of the Ninth Congressional District of Missouri has nominated Hon. John M. Glover for Congressman from this district;

Resolved, That the Greenback Labor party in convention assembled, recognizing in him a man of ability, integrity, independence, and a representative of the new era of progress upon which St. Louis has entered, and in him a man who will not be controlled by cliques and corporations, and who is in sympathy with the true interest of the whole people; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we do hereby indorse his candidacy and pledge our united efforts to secure his election.

These resolutions indicate as a further inducement to Mr. Glover's nomination that he is regarded as an advanced and progressive Democrat, and not a Bourbon.

It is this free and untrammeled action of the convention which the State Committee desires to overturn. The Congressional Committee, superior within their jurisdiction to the State Committee, deny the authority of the State Committee to strike down a member of its own body because the people of his district choose to exercise their unquestioned prerogative of deciding as they pleased upon a matter of political expediency. The committee and the leaders can only recommend a course of action; the people are supreme. I put it to the State Committee that if they have the power to expel a member because his people did not follow their views, they in effect can make, by action of their committee, the Congressional nominations through the whole State by simply striking down the committeeman and replacing him with another until they have the action they desire.

Your committee knows that I and I alone had the power to call the Congressional Convention. There was no Congressional Committee. Such a committee for the Ninth District was elected for the first time after Mr. Glover was nominated. The attempted substitution of Kirkpatrick was with the view of having him perform this very function of calling a new convention.

The alleged action of the State Committee is based on the idea that it has the power to annul the action of the people and expel its own members if the action of the people does not suit the committee. It has neither.

The action of the committee is based on the idea that a man accused secretly can be condemned unheard and expelled in private on ex parte statements without even a meeting of the committee. No such verdict would be supported in a court of justice or respected elsewhere.

The action of the committee ignores the right of the people to elect their own representatives. My place was, and my successor's must be, given by the people, not by the committee. Any further agitation of this subject or the perseverance of the parties concerned in the desperate campaign already marked out can only result in the disorganization of the district and the party. It will be viewed with suspicion as tending to turn the party over to a man who is now generally believed to get nothing that he does not buy. It cannot divest Mr. Glover of his legitimate and regular nomination. If there is any action in the nature of a bolting indorsement of any other candidate, it will result in a split in this district and incalculable injury to the cause of fusion in this city and State.

A large majority of the Congressional Committee of the Ninth District, of which I am chairman, concur in these views.

Very respectfully, yours,

O. M. BONNY,

State Committeeman, Ninth Congressional District of Missouri.

VISITORS to the city should not fail to visit our beautiful cemeteries, Bellefontaine and Calvary, and view the many works of art, and the graves of Benton, Price, and other lamented dead. Take Fifth street cars north.

Amusement Notes.

Most of the performances last evening, did not conclude till past midnight.

W. J. Scanlan, who appears at the People's next week, sings ten songs of his own composition.

Matinees are held at all the theaters, except the Casino to-day. An extra matinee will be held at People's to-morrow.

Benjamin Tuthill is in town working away for the Florences, who open at the Olympic next week. Mr. Tuthill is the guest of George Hener. The Forences are coining the almighty dollar.

"A Bunch of Keys" has unlocked the public purse and dollars pour in a way which affords complete satisfaction to the Olympic coffers. Grimes and Snaggs, esq., have caught the town and packed houses greet their hotel hit nightly. The musical features are also excellent.

Gus Williams, at the People's, is more than ever popularizing his superb character of "Capt. Mishler," and business in consequence is very large. His peculiarly fascinating Germanisms take immensely, and his excellent representation of New York police life finds a realistic medium in Capt. Mishler. He sings his own songs, and they are handsomely received.

The Grand Opera had another very large house last evening, and "My Partner" was very enthusiastically received. Louis Aldrich was the recipient of an ovation, his Joe Saunders fairly captivating the audience. Wing Lee, the Chinaman, and the Mary Brandon of Dora Goldthwaite were unusually well rendered. The play is the best of the American drama, and is rich in sentiment and the situations are strong.

The attendance at Gregory's Fifth Street Dime Museum is increasing daily, and the patronage find a first-class list of attractions in the many curiosities and monstrosities of nature exhibited. Isaac Sprague, the 38-pound skeleton, a female jumbo, a pair of midgets, and an excellent entertainment in the theatorium, constitute in part a strong bill of enjoyable features.

George H. Adams, the best Humpty Dumpty living, is crowding the Standard in his new pantomime and miniature circus. The excellence of the performance is attested by box office receipts, which thus far since opening night have been something big. Among the specialty features which have taken are Cardello and Van Auken, gymnasts; Nellie St. John and Emma Rice, vocalists, and Mr. and Mrs. Jules Tissot in their "living pictures."

Broadway and Treyser's Museum, on North Sixth street, continues to draw immense gatherings, and its popularity is evidenced in the wonderful combination of museum and specialty features, and a varied and attractive theatorium programme. The exhibition of animals is the largest ever seen here, and with a horde of curious freaks of nature, it is no wonder people flock to the museum.

"The Devil's Auction" is meeting with magnificent success at Pope's, and it has proved to be the best of this class of spectacular pantomime performances. Last night Pope's was crowded to the doors, and the ballet specialty acts and scenic display, was the best of the week thus far. It is a superb piece of spectacular display, and is handsomely presented on the well-adapted stage. The Peacock ballet continues to catch the crowd.

The Casino variety performance is something great, the diversified bill of entertaining items are filling the house to the doors at every performance. A notably fine feature of last evening, was the artistic act of the renowned gymnasts Hulmes and Orville. While their heads were blindfolded in sacks, a complete somersault was turned in mid-air. It is a most daring act. Prof. Harry Parker, Dewitt Cook, the club swinger, and Mills, the change artist, are among the interesting features. A matinee will take place to-morrow.

Samuel B. Stannard, an old and highly respected citizen died suddenly at his home, 4417 North Nineteenth street, last night. It is supposed he was afflicted with heart disease. He was engaged in the lumber business, was several times a member of the City Council and Acting Mayor of the city.

Mr. H. J. Hill of Toronto, Ont., who was appointed a member of the committee selected to choose a place for the World's Fair in 1892 is in the city and says the majority of the committees are in favor of St. Louis. A general meeting will be held here December 3.

The remains of D. I. Kipp, the railroad man who shot himself Monday, will be shipped to his parents near Louisville, Ind.

An Exchange of Clothing.

Frank J. Dougherty, from the neighborhood of St. Charles, had his coat and vest stolen last night at Hurst's hotel. Mr. Dougherty witnessed the Veiled Prophet's pageant and attended Pope's theatre, returning to the hotel about 2:30 o'clock. He occupied a cot in one of the halls and on awaking this morning found an old worn out coat and a pair of rusty shoes substituted for his own. He had placed his clothing under his cot, and the vest, coat and stockings were missing. In the coat and vest were some $10 or $12 in money and a silver watch, which were also taken. He was shivering under the caresses of the cold wave in his shirt sleeves this morning, while some other fellow was better prepared for it.

TEEMER TARDY.

He Seems to Have Grown Less Anxious to Meet Gaudaur.

The Local Oarsman and His Backer Still Eager for the Fray—The Browns and Mets Play a Tie Game—St. Louis Defeats Cincinnati—Sporting Gossip and Diamond Chips.

The proceedings in the Gaudaur-Teemer proposed race are in statuo quo, for reason of Teemer's dereliction in failing to respond to the plain, business-like proposition of Mr. J. A. St. John. In the face of all the preliminary practice on paper and in conversation in which Teemer has been indulging, it seems strange that he should suddenly subside under the pressure of a challenge, which, if he at all means business, ought to move him to action. He has had ample time to reflect upon the importance of the race, and since his sweeping defi at Boston and again paraded at McKeesport, directed particularly at Gaudaur, Mr. St. John has taken particular pains to inform him by telegram and letter that Gaudaur is only too anxious to accommodate him. His protracted silence certainly savors of a bluff, and it does not reflect credit upon his actions. "I have received no response from him," said Mr. St. John this morning, "but received a telegram from Eph. Morris, his supposed right bower, asking if I had received his (Morris') letter. I not only received his letter, but sent a telegraphic acknowledgment, stipulating therein my eagerness to come to an understanding on the race question. I also wrote him, and he has had ample time to respond." Mr. St. John is a sort of living monument to Longfellow's "Watch and Wait," so strongly exemplified in the present predicament. He is a good waiter.

Declined With Thanks.

At a recent meeting of the Missouri Gymnasium Society the nominations of officers for the ensuing year were made. Mr. St. John was tendered the nomination for president, but in a letter to the management he states his inability to accept the honor, owing to lack of time and business arrangements. He expresses his thanks for the generous offer.

The New York League Club.

Ex-Manager Tuthill of the defunct Minneapolis team is in the city, at the head of the Florences. Ben Tuthill is a base-ball enthusiast and is wrapped up in the fascination of the game. His devotion runs in the managerial direction, and he had a good deal of success at the head of the Minneapolis Club. He brought out Bob Caruthers, the Browns' phenomenal young pitcher, and has developed several players who are achieving distinction on the ball field. Having decided to return to the field next season, he has already received several flattering offers from prominent clubs, and President Day of the New York League is very desirous of securing services. He will, in all probability, be found with the New York gilt-edged nine next season. Among other things he gained this season was his clever piece of strategy in signing Clarkson, the pitcher, for the Chicago League Club. The Cincinnati Club was after Clarkson, and it broke Caylor's heart when the strings were pulled in the direction of the windy city.

To-Morrow's Game.

The St. Louis Unions and the Nationals of Washington will, weather permitting, play games at the Union Grounds every day during the present week. To-morrow's game will be called at 3:30, with the nines placed in this way:

St. Louis.	Position.	Nationals.
Baker	Catcher	Fulmer.
Sweeny	Pitcher	Wise.
Quinn	1 base	Joy.
Dunlap	2 base	Evers.
Gleason	3 base	McCormick.
Rowe	s. field	Halpin.
Boyle	l. field	Moore.
Lewis	c. field	Gagus.
Shafer	r. field	Powell.

Games Yesterday.

The Metropolitans and the St. Louis clubs played a tie game at New York yesterday, neither club securing a run in nine innings; Cincinnati beat Allegheny 8 to 3; Toledo and Brooklyn played a drawn game, 4 to 4, in eight innings; Baltimore beat Louisville 6 to 4.

In the League: Providence beat Cleveland 9 to 7; Boston beat Buffalo 7 to 3: Detroit defeated New York 5 to 1.

In the Union Association: St. Louis defeated Cincinnati 2 to 1.

Not Exactly Fair.

"Chips" continues mud-throwing in the Canadian Sportsman, and unbosoms himself in his comments on the late Gaudaur-Hosmer race at Creve Cœur Lake in the following style. He is in hard luck when he allows his doubting Thomas nature to influence his opinions:

"And so Gaudaur beat Hosmer. I am not surprised. The Boston boy I knew not to be in such good fettle as he might have been. He was not only stale, but Creve Cœur lake is a place where the climatic influences are decidedly in favor of the resident and against the stranger. Gaudaur has been thoroughly acclimatized, but Hosmer was only a few days from the fresh breezes of Massachusetts. Hanlan felt the effects of the place when he was there and possibly the New Englander did the same. Still, from all accounts Gaudaur proved himself a far better man than was generally expected. The water, it is stated, was lumpy and against fast time. Not so very long ago 20:50 for three miles would have been considered remarkably rapid on still water, but times have changed and, thanks to modern improvements, all things travel faster nowadays than they were wont to do. Gaudaur, it is said, pulled up fresh and could have gone much faster, but how much faster? In the early spring it was stated that he rowed two miles in 12:28 and on Sunday he took 9:43¼ to row a mile and a half, that is to the turning buoys. In face of that performance I can well understand that some people could be persuaded that he really did row the two miles straightaway in the time mentioned. The time in this race, if the course was true, is only at the rate of 13 minutes for the two miles, and we are told the water was lumpy, which, according to the degree of lumpiness, might almost make 15 seconds difference in a mile. Notwithstanding all this, I am still of opinion that Jake Gaudaur cannot under the most favorable circumstances row two full miles on Creve Cœur Lake in 12 minutes and 28 seconds, and I repeat that in my opinion 20:20 would be found to be about his fastest three mile with turn time, and that is only half a minute faster than he is reported to have rowed his race against Hosmer. The latter is speedy for a distance, but soon breaks up, and I do not think that a man can stand the wear and tear of training for, and competing in, pedestrian races during the winter, and training for, and competing in, rowing races in the summer, and do himself justice in all.

"If Gaudaur is really the good man his friends imagine he has blossomed into, he will have an opportunity to show it when he meets Wallace Ross or John Teemer, both of whom he is said to intend to challenge. He even talks of beating Hanlan over three miles. He will do well to be cautious how he moves or he will be tripped up as sure as fate. When he was in Toronto, I have reason to know he was tried in fast time, but did not prove himself able to repeat when the question was asked in earnest."

Diamond Chips.

H. F. Price is, it is said, making an effort to get into a National League for Pittsburg next season.

The Mets have been drawing splendidly at home the past week. "Nothing succeeds like success," especially in New York.

At their present rate of success St. Louis will surely finish second. Columbus and Louisville have taken a lofty drop. Cincinnati can't beat St. Louis.

The wind-up of the American Association season demonstrates that there are really no longer any "soft snap" clubs therein. All are now worthy foemen of the strongest opponents.

Manager Mason is going to take the Athletic Club to New Orleans this winter. He will play at all the prominent Southern cities en route. Southern managers should address him at 139 North Eighth street, Philadelphia. They open in New Orleans December 14.

It is more than likely that Foutz pitched yesterday's game in New York, though McGinnis is credited with the work. McGinnis pitched in Brooklyn the day before and it is quite improbable that he again pitched yesterday.

Manager Walsh denies the statement that the Louisville and Cincinnati Union Club will play October 18 and 19. Some of the Louisville players propose doing so after the season closes, but they will not be permitted to use the club name.

The peculiar delivery of Gorman, Allegheny's new pitcher, has earned for him the nickname "Stooping Jack." When about to deliver the ball he gets down almost on his knees, then suddenly rises and sends the ball in with terrific force.

The Cincinnati team will disband in the East. Fennerly will go home to Fall River, Corkhill to Philadelphia, Snyder to Washington, Powers to Canada, Mountjoy to Port Huron and the rest return to Cincinnati, where Hick Carpenter will organize his Southern team.

"For heaven's sake who has got it," is the cry of exasperation as to the status of the Ohio league race. Dayton claims it with fifty-five games won, and twenty-one lost. Springfield says it is their's with fifty-five games won, and twenty-one lost. It's a good thing it belongs in Ohio.

The Louisville Club is in a bad condition, and now practically plays with but six men. Browning has not been able to play a game this trip and now Hecker has been sent home very ill. One or two more men on the team are hardly able to crawl about. This is indeed hard luck.

And still the list of arm-breaking pitchers continues to grow. The latest case happened September 29, when Ed. Brosius, while pitching for the Catawissa nine in a game between that club and a club from Bloomsburg at Danville, broke his right arm above the elbow as he was in the act of throwing the ball.

Sporting Sundries.

Maud S. will another effort to beat her record October 15.

Fred. Archer has had over 200 winning mounts this season, nearly 100 more than his nearest opponent, C. Wood.

Mr. Baird of Newcastle-on-Tyne, offers to match James Percy to run and row any man of 45 years and upward one mile for $500 to $2,500. He prefers that Percy shall meet an American.

John Murphy issues a sweeping challenge to turfites. He wants to match a trotter and mate against any trotter and mate in the world, or he will match two horses to run to the pole against any other two for any amount.

McGrath, who rode Disturbance in the steeplechase at Jerome Park, October 2, was suspended for the remainder of the meeting, the judge thinking he had not done his best on the horse which prevented him from winning.

Patrick Fitzgerald, the champion pedestrian of Long Island, and Charley Rowell of England have been matched for a six-day go-as-you-please race to take place in Madison Square Garden early in March 1885. The race will be open to all comers.

The college foot ball rules for 1884, just issued, disqualify a player for a single foul. This is the result of the protest made by the Harvard faculty last season, when each player could receive three warnings for fouls before being disqualified,

The Dwyer brothers, owners of Miss Woodford, whose wonderful performances as a 3 and 4-year old have astonished and delighted the frequenters of the turf, have retired the game and speedy mare for the season. Her racing plates have been sent to a silversmith's to be set in beds of solid silver. They will be presented to various friends as souvenirs of the famous mare.

Isador Cohnfield, owner of the champion stallion Maxey Cobb, has purchased of Robert Steel, Philadelphia, the bay mare Neta Medium, record 2:22¾, 10 years old, by Happy Medium, dam the McCauley mare, by Yankee Trick, son of Golden Farmer. The mare is said to have shown, before sale, a half-mile in 1:10¼ to the pole. The price paid for the mare is said to have been $7,500, the chestnut mare Helene, record 2:21, by Hambletonian Prince, being given in part payment.

John Mitchell, the owner of Meadowbrook Farm, at Cornwall, N. Y., and the owner also of the wonderful milk-producing 3-year-old Holstein heifers Jamaica and Ethelka, was compelled, a few days ago, to kill his large Holstein bull Iroquois, for which he had only recently refused $7,000. The bull became ugly, and while his keeper was leading him to water, tossed him into the air, and after this he became unmanageable, and his death was decided upon. The bull was a big fellow, and his quarters weighed 1,450 pounds after being dressed. He had taken first premiums at many fairs.

Veiled Prophets! Illumination! Exposition Fair!

What other city in the world offers such attractions? The illumination alone is worth a long journey to see. No other city ever attempted an illumination on as grand a scale, nor even formed a remote conception of one like it. To see the mere fixtures in day-time only will enthuse the dullest intellect. The long arbors and grand arches, bedecked with myriads of bright colored globes, which shine in the sunlight like so many variegated gems, to look upon the vastness and beauty of which will send a thrill of gladness to the heart of any one. The Veiled Prophets—well, what is the use to attempt a description of their splendor? Like a meteor they appear and disappear. No one knows who they are, nor what they are going to look like next time. All we know is that they will reappear in another year, but no sooner nor any oftener. Shakespeare himself could not have.—But we really intended to say that "Radiant Home" Base Burners are the best heating stoves in the world; that the fire backs of the "Superior" stoves are guaranteed to last five years. THE NEW YORK STAGE.

Mme. Janisch Falls in a Fit of Hysteria on the Stage at the Park.

Overwork and Excitement Resulting From Adverse Criticism Pronounced the Cause.—Hopes That She Will Resume Work After a Brief Rest.—Opening of Daly's With "A Wooden Spoon."—A Light, But Amusing and Meritorious Piece.—Prospects For the Season.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

New York, October 8.—In the letter scene, near the close of the third act, in the play of "Louisa," at the new Park Theater last night, Mme. Janisch rushed cross the stage and threw herself into a chair. This was a part of the business, but when she fell on her face, Mr. Plunkett, who plays the part of Warm, thought something new had been added. He waited a few minutes for the actress to continue but she was still lying on the floor, and approaching her he saw that she was deathly pale and that her hands were clutched. He was alarmed and was about to go to her assistance when Mme. Janisch's companion, who had been watching her from the flies, as she is wont to do, rushed to her mistress. The curtain was hurriedly rung down and the prostrate actress was removed to a waiting-room and Doctors Armstrong and Pope were summoned. Janisch was unconscious and declared to be suffering from hystenia. An explanation was given the audience, and, still later, when it was found that she could not act again last evening, despite the strenuous efforts of the physicians to restore her, the performance was closed. It was sometime before she was restored to consciousness and her first words were: "Go on. I'm ready for the next act." She was removed to the Victoria Hotel and put under the influence of ether. The physicians say that she is suffering from overwork and great excitement, and needs to be kept quiet. How long she will be required to rest they cannot determine until later. It is said that all knowledge of the adverse criticisms of her playing has been kept from the actress. Manager Sargent has not permitted her to read the papers and the first intimation she had that her efforts were not well received was gained from a member of the company on Monday. She was greatly excited and upbraided Sargent for keeping the news from her. Yesterday she was still suffering from excitement and last evening, before the performance, it was thought that she might break down. Late last night she exhibited great courage and charged her companion to see that everything was in readiness for the rehearsal this morning.

"A Wooden Spoon" at Daly's.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

New York, October 8.—A hearty welcome was tendered to each member of Mr. Daly's company last evening, and in receiving Miss Rehan, Mrs. Gilbert, Mr. Lewis and Mr. Drew, the audience forgot the conventionalities, and broke into cheers. In fact, it was all through the evening a very noisy audience, made up of people who had gone to the theater to enjoy themselves, and to celebrate the return of some deservedly popular actors, and who were well prepared for the celebration. The season at Daly's was opened under such circumstances, in a most cheerful manner, and it promises to afford an abundance of relaxation for a tired brain, incidentally, perhaps, giving the owners of the brains a magnified glimpse of themselves as others see them. The play of the evening was of a well-known pattern, a trifling comedy, based upon a German piece by Von Schontan, dealing with New York people of the present day, and bristling in its dialogue with allusions to local neighborhoods and familiar customs.

"A WOODEN SPOON"

is not wholly farcical, although many of its situations and some of its characters belong to farce rather than to comedy. It carries with it a moral which is wholesome, whether or not an application can be easily found for it, for it teaches, or aims to teach, that a woman is foolish who neglects a comfortable home and a matter-of-fact husband to seek consolation for imaginary afflictions in sentimental dreams. Superficially the new piece deals with a certain phase of local politics and journalism, and of course it discovers in both of these callings much

FOOD FOR LAUGHTER.

It must be confessed that the view of the profession of journalism to be derived from "A Wooden Spoon" is not encouraging, but the subject is treated with the utmost good humor, and it must be admitted the conception of a hired publisher and responsible editor, whose duty it is to go to jail in case of successful prosecution for libel, is tolerably original. The plot of Mr. Daly's latest adaptation is of slender proportions. Mrs. Perdita Grumbleigh, in her youth, loved a poet, but she married Titus Grumbleigh, a cotton manufacturer. After a quarter of a century of married happiness the poet's name is heard abroad; he is a successful writer. She reads his books, quotes him, forces his ideas upon her husband and children, and, when he is thrust into politics, follows him. Finally she meets him, a cross-grained, ugly, intensely practical old fellow, who has been twice married and has seven children. Her dream is dispelled, but there are a few complications to be settled before the play can end happily with the union of four young lovers and the reunion of two old ones. The title is derived from the obsolete custom at Yale of awarding a wooden spoon to the most popular member of each class.

THE CAST.

Mr. John Drew, as Paul Impulse, a young editor, is the wooden-spoon man; Mr. Lewis is Titus, Mrs. Gilbert, Perdita; Miss Ada Rehan, their daughter Aphra, and Mr. Charles Fisher, the poet. Besides these, Mr. Lederq, Mr. Otis Skinner, Mr. William Gilbert, Mr. Parkes, and Miss Edith Kingdon have parts in the comedy, and the acting is of that delightfully smooth and natural description which play-goers have grown to look for at this theatre. Mr. Lewis and Mrs. Gilbert have the most conspicuous characters, and they invest them with a quaintness and drollery all their own. Miss Rehan presents with her accustomed archness one of those indescribable pictures of Young American womanhood which have made a lasting impression upon the playgoers of New York and London, and Mr. Drew, who aims to be the only light comedian of his day, enacts the rather slender character alloted to him with a refinement of manner and buoyancy of touch which are too rarely seen on the contemporary stage. A bit of genuine comedy in the last act is the best chance the piece presents to show Drew, and he makes the most of it. Mr. Otis Skinner and Miss Kingdon, two members of the company who have not hitherto appeared with it in New York, are both valuable acquisitions.

Whether or not

will enjoy a long term of popularity we are not prepared to say. It drags a little in the second and third acts, and the last act needs compression. The political allusions should be dispensed with altogether. The heat and turmoil of the political campaign derange business and home life. They can at least be shut out of the theater. The new play is set upon the stage richly and with good taste.

GREED OF GAIN

Prompts a Farmer to Barter Away His Daughter—Her Plucky Refusal.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

Port Jarvis, October 8.—A wealthy middle-aged widower named Dominick Mines owns a farm on the border of Wayne and Luzerne Counties, Penn. It is occupied by a farmer named Obert, and Mines boarded there with his family. Obert's daughter Lena is a pretty girl of 18 years. Both Obert and his wife are noted for being extremely close-fisted and for an almost insane desire to be rich. A month or so ago Mines, offered to make a deed of a farm near the one on which he lived if Obert would give him his daughter in marriage. Although the daughter was entirely ignorant of the fact that the widower Mines desired to marry her, her parents eagerly accepted his offer. They said nothing to the girl about their intentions toward her, and Mines never alluded to it in his daily conversations with her. The Oberts at once began to prepare for the wedding, which was set down for the evening of October 1. Week before last Mrs. Obert greatly astonished her daughter by telling her that she intended to give a large party. She gave her no hint, however, as to what the occasion of the party was to be. The people who were invited were also not informed of the true character of the gathering. The fact that the Oberts were to give a party created great surprise in the neighborhood, as they had never been known before to extend the slightest hospitality to any one. A new dress was ordered for Lena, and it was brought home from Scranton by her father on the afternoon of the day of the party. With it were so many things that suggested bridal apparel that the girl said to her mother that if she wore them people would think she was to be a bride. Her mother thereupon told her all, and that the neighbors had been invited to witness her marriage to Dominick Mines. A neighbor's girl who had been engaged to help in the house on that day says that upon hearing the truth about the party, Lena stood for some time staring at her mother, pale and speechless. Then she seized the wedding garments and, tearing them into shreds, scattered them about the room. After denouncing both her father and mother for their unnatural conduct, she left the house. She walked all the way to Scranton, where she has friends, with whom she is still. The true situation at Obert's was explained to the guests as they arrived for the party, and all of them left the house, filled with indignation at the parents of the girl, and with feelings of sympathy and admiration for the daughter, who had so bravely refused to barter herself for their gain.

SUCCESSFUL BUSINESS MEN.

Splendid Instances of What Pluck, Energy and Perseverance Can Accomplish.

The history of all great enterprises is a story of growth from small things into large, and from little beginnings, step by step, to great ends. The enterprise which is thus built up is constructed on sure foundations, each stone in its upward progress being laid with care and labor sufficient to make it firm and immovable. No finer illustration of what the unaided endeavors of men who start out with purposes in life and who bring to its accomplishment, energy, integrity and persistent industry is furnished than by the history of the firm of Penny & Gentles, proprietors of the great North Broadway dry goods and notion establishment. Thirteen years ago Alexander Penny and John Gentles, two young Scotchmen, immigrated to America in the hope of bettering their conditions. They had all the pluck, persistent energy and firmness of purpose which distinguishes their race. They were enthusiastic and determined to win, in the new country to which they were going, all the success that honest effort could command. To this end they united their fortunes and resolved to work together. They first went to Montreal, but shortly afterwards pushed on to Quebec. After looking over the field, however, they concluded that Canada did not offer the opportunities which could be found in the United States, and hence they made their way to New York and from there to the great West. Fortunately they decided upon St. Louis as the proper place to begin their life's work. When the two men reached the city their joint capital amounted to only $13. The first employment which was offered came from the Wm. Barr Company, where they accepted positions as clerks at small salaries.

In 1874, or three years after settling in St. Louis, Penny & Gentles had saved enough money to start a little dry goods and notion store at 912 Franklin avenue, and, with a knowledge of business acquired at Barr's, they prospered equal to their most sanguine expectations. The little store for their increasing trade, and a move was made further down, the firm locating on Franklin avenue, between Fifth and Sixth. Their business continued to improve, and in 1880 they secured adjoining buildings, doubling the size of their store. But this was not sufficient to accommodate the great stock of goods which must be kept on hand to satisfy the customers whom the firm had secured by the quality of their wares and honest prices at which they were sold. In 1882 Penny & Gentles again enlarged their stores, so that to-day they occupy ten times as much space as they did when they first commenced business, hardly eight years ago. It is doubtful if any store in this city can exhibit such a record of prosperity as this. From the very beginning of their mercantile career Penny & Gentles attracted public attention. They were at once recognized as men of rare sagacity in providing at fair prices whatever is desirable in silks and dry goods. The goods sold by this house are the best, which accountsfor the unparalleled success of the two Scotchmen, who are not ashamed of the fact that they were not long since working behind the counter. Penny & Gentles are contemplating some magnificent improvements next year, adding three more stores, almost doubling their present capacity. They will erect a mammoth building at the corner of Fifth and Franklina venue, which will be an architectural triumph and peculiarly adapted for the purpose to which it will be devoted. It will enable the firm to carry as any house in the West. In a historical sketch of this establishment it is hardly necessary to go into a detailed account of the goods to be found there. Everything in silks (cloaks), dry goods and notions is on sale. None of the competitors of the house can boast of a more substantial class of patrons. The highest tribute that can be paid to Penny & Gentles' business qualifications and integrity is evidenced by their rapid stride from pigmies, in the mercantile world to a position by the side of the greatest houses in St. Louis. There are many people in this city who will not trade anywhere except at Penny & Gentles'. They have confidence in the house, and although other establishments may be just as reasonable and accommodating, the modest, unpretending way the Scotchmen have of doing business has impressed them favorably, and they always make their purchases at that store. The reader can draw his own moral from the page in the mercantile history of St. Louis which has been written by Penny & Gentles. It is certainly a creditable record, without a blemish, and young men of energy, honesty and a determination to win an honorable name, with plenty of this world's goods, may find encouragement in this brief account of how the heads of this firm have risen to occupy a leading and commanding position in the dry goods trade of this city.

Breaking Up the "Colossus" and "Java" In the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

Washington, D. C., October 8.—The Navy Department has begun the work of breaking up a couple of old vessels, relics of the war, as directed by order of Congress. They are the "Colossus" and "Java," vessels which were begun in 1863, when war vessels were in great demand. They were to be very large and effective, but owing to the impossibility of getting seasoned timber, it was found necessary to build them of green wood. Work progressed rather slowly, and when it was seen that the war was nearing an end it was suspended. The work on the vessels themselves was pretty well completed but the machinery had not been put in. Soon the style of modern warfare became such as to show the utter worthlessness of the hulls as built and they were left to stand and decay. The acid in the wood of which they were built, which would have been largely neutralized by the salt water had they been put afloat, soon did its work, and to-day great heaps of the dry rotted timber are being sold for a few cents or a dollar or two at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, where they are being broken up. The Colossus was to have been armored, and would have been, to look at, one of the finest iron-clads of that day. Her cost was estimated at two million dollars, while the Java was to cost a million and a half. It is probable that their actual cost was nearly two millions, while they, of course, accomplished nothing and will now bring only a few hundred dollars, the iron in them being their only value. Mr. Robeson's method of getting rid of these old fellows, when he was Secretary of the Navy was, it will be remembered, not to break them up as is now being done with these, but to run them ashore and burn them, picking up the old iron afterward.
